A KEY TO THE EXERCISES.

BY LINDLEY MURRAY.

"They who are learning to compose and arrange their sentences with accuracy and order, are learning, at the same time, to think with accuracy and order."—BLAIR.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

VOLUME II.

THE EIGHTH EDITION.

LONDON:
LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, AND LONGMANS.
1853.
ADVERTISEMENT TO VOL. II.

This volume comprehends,

First, Exercises adapted to the various Rules;
Secondly, a Key to the Exercises;

Thirdly, a Copious Alphabetical Index to the whole work.

The Exercises and Key form practical illustrations, both of the principles, and the most important notes and observations, contained in the first volume. The correspondence between the two volumes has been so carefully marked, that the reader will have no difficulty in comparing every Rule in the first, with its appropriate Exercise and Key in the second. In this comparison, he will always find a variety of exemplification, and, in many instances, extended views of the subject. These examples supersede the necessity of a great number of minute, subordinate rules.
In forming the Alphabetical Index, the design of the author was not merely to assist the student in readily discovering particular points of Grammar; but also to express the most important principles of the art, in short, comprehensive, and striking sentences, calculated to stimulate the learner's curiosity, and to impress the subjects more deeply on his memory. In a word, the author was desirous that the work should at once form an Index to particulars, and an Epitome of the chief rules and principles of the language.

CHAPTER I.

EXERCISES IN PARSING, AS IT RESPECTS ETYMOLOGY ALONE.

SECTION I.

ETYMOLOGICAL PARSING TABLE.

What part of speech?
1. An article. What kind? Why?
3. An adjective. What degree of comparison? To what does it belong? Why an adjective?
6. An adverb. Why is it an adverb?
7. A preposition. Why a preposition?
8. A conjunction. What kind? Why is it a conjunction?
9. An interjection. Why?
SECTION II.

SPECIMENS OF ETYMOLOGICAL PARSING.

"Hope animates us."

Hope is a common substantive of the third person, in the singular number, and the nominative case. [Decline the substantive.] Animates is a regular verb active, indicative mood, present tense, third person singular. [Repeat the present tense, the imperfect tense, and the perfect participle; and sometimes conjugate the verb entirely.] Us is a personal pronoun, first person plural, and in the objective case. [Decline the pronoun.]

"A peaceful mind is virtue's reward."

A is the indefinite article. Peaceful is an adjective. [Repeat the degrees of comparison.] Mind is a common substantive, of the third person, in the singular number, and the nominative case. [Decline the substantive.] Is is an irregular verb neuter, indicative mood, present tense, and the third person singular. SECTION III.

1. Article, Substantive, Adjective, Pronoun, and Verb.

A fragrant flower.
The verdant fields.
Peaceful abodes.
Fruit delicious.
A happier life.
A better world.
The sweetest incense.
The noblest prospect.
Virtue’s fair form.
The good man’s hope.
An affectionate parent.
An obedient son.
Charles is disinterested.
You respect him.
We completed our work.
Your hope has failed.
He had resigned himself.
Their fears will prevail.
You shall submit.
He will have determined.
We shall have agreed.
Let me depart.
Do you instruct him.

Prepare your lessons.
Let us improve ourselves.
They may offend.
I can forgive.
He might surpass them.
We could overtake him.
I would be happy.
You should repent.
He may have succeeded.
He might have failed.
Weshould have considered.
To see the sun is pleasant.
To have conquered him-

we advance our own.
He lives respected.
Having resigned his of-ice, he retired.

They are discouraged.
He was condemned.
We have been rewarded.
She had been admired.
Virtue will be rewarded. The person will have been executed, when the pardon arrives. Let him be animated. Be you entreated. It can be enlarged. You may be discovered. He might be convinced. It would be caressed. I may have been deceived. He might have been lost. To be trusted, we must be virtuous. To have been admired, availed him little. Being reviled, we bless. Ridiculed, despised, persecuted, he maintained his principles. Having been deserted, he became discouraged. The sight being new, he startled. Our hearts are deceitful. His esteem is my honour. Every heart knows its own sorrows. Which was his work? Hers is done, mine is not. Who can help us? Whose books are these? One may deceive one's self.

Adverb, Preposition, Conjunction, and Interjection.

I have seen him once, perhaps twice. Thirdly, and lastly, I shall conclude. This plant is found here, and elsewhere. Only to-day is properly ours.

The task is already performed. We could not serve him then, but we will hereafter. He is much more promising now than formerly.

Vol. II.
EXERCISES.

We often resolve, but seldom perform.
We are wisely and happily directed.
He has certainly been diligent, and he will probably succeed.
Mentally and bodily, we are curiously and wonderfully formed.
They travelled through France, in haste, towards Italy.
From virtue to vice, the progress is gradual.
By diligence and frugality, we arrive at competency.
We are often below our wishes, and above our desert.
Some things make for him, others against him.
By this imprudence, he was plunged into new difficulties.
Without the aid of charity, he supported himself with credit.

On all occasions, she behaved with propriety.
We in vain look for a path between virtue and vice.
He lives within his income.
The house was sold at a great price, and above its value.
She came down stairs slowly, but went briskly up again.
His father, and mother, and uncle, reside at Rome.
We must be temperate, if we would be healthy.
He is as old as his classmate, but not so learned.
Charles is esteemed, because he is both discreet and benevolent.
We will stay till he arrives.
He retires to rest soon, that he may rise early.
We ought to be thankful, for we have received much.
Though he is often advised, yet he does not reform.

Reproof either softens, or hardens its object.

Neither prosperity, nor adversity, has improved him.

He can acquire no virtue, unless he make some sacrifices.

Let him that standeth, take heed lest he fall.

He will be detected, though he deny the fact.

If he has promised, he should act accordingly.

If he were encouraged, he would amend.

Though he condemn me, I will respect him.

Their talents are more brilliant than useful.

Notwithstanding his poverty, he is a wise and worthy person.

If our desires are moderate, our wants will be few.

Hope often amuses, but seldom satisfies us.

Though he is lively, yet he is not volatile.

O peace! how desirable thou art!

I have been often occupied, alas! with trifles.

Strange! that we should be so infatuated.

O! the humiliations to which vice reduces us.

Hark! how sweetly the woodlark sings!

Ah! the delusions of hope.

Behold! how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

Hail, simplicity! source of genuine joy.

Welcome again! my long lost friend.
SECTION IV.

A FEW INSTANCES OF THE SAME WORD'S CONSTITUTING SEVERAL OF THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

Calm was the day, and the scene delightful. We may expect a calm after a storm.
To prevent passion, is easier than to calm it.
Better is a little with content, than a great deal with anxiety.
The gay and dissolute think little of the miseries, which are stealing softly after them.
A little attention will rectify some errors.
Though he is out of danger, he is still afraid.
He laboured to still the tumult.
Still waters are commonly deepest.
Fair and softly go far.
The fair was numerously attended.
His character is fair and honourable.

Damp air is unwholesome.
Guilt often casts a damp over our sprightliest hours.
Soft bodies damp the sound, much more than hard ones.
Tho' she is rich and fair, yet she is not amiable.
They are yet young, and must suspend their judgment yet a while.
Many persons are better than we suppose them to be.
The few and the many have their prepossessions.
Few days pass without some clouds.
The hail was very destructive.
Hail virtue! source of every good.
We hail you as friends.
Much money is corrupting.
Think much, and speak little.
He has seen much of the world, and been much caressed.
His years are more than hers; but he has not more knowledge.
The more we are blessed, the more grateful we should be.
The desire of getting more is rarely satisfied.
He has equal knowledge, but inferior judgment.
She is his inferior in sense, but his equal in prudence.
Every being loves its like.
We must make a like space between the lines.
Behave yourselves like men.
We are too apt to like pernicious company.

He may go or stay as he likes.
They strive to learn.
He goes to and fro.
To his wisdom we owe our privilege.
The proportion is ten to one.
He has served them with his utmost ability.
When we do our utmost, no more is required.
I will submit, for I know submission brings peace.
It is for our health to be temperate.
O! for better times.
I have a regard for him.
He is esteemed, both on his own account, and on that of his parents.
Both of them deserve praise.
Yesterday was a fine day.
I rode out yesterday.
I shall write to-morrow.
To-morrow may be brighter than to-day.
In your whole behaviour, be humble and obliging.
Virtue is the universal charm.
True politeness has its seat in the heart.
We should endeavour to please, rather than to shine and dazzle.
Opportunities occur daily for strengthening in ourselves the habits of virtue.
Compassion prompts us to relieve the wants of others.
A good mind is unwilling to give pain to either man or beast.
Peevishness and passion often produce, from trifles, the most serious mischiefs.
Discontent often nourishes passions, equally malignant in the cottage and in the palace.
A great proportion of human evils is created by ourselves.
A passion for revenge, has always been considered as the mark of a little and mean mind.
If greatness flatters our vanity, it multiplies our dangers.
To our own failings we are commonly blind.
The friendships of young persons, are often founded on capricious likings.
In your youthful amusements, let no unfairness be found.

Engrave on your minds this sacred rule: "Do unto others, as you wish that they should do unto you."

Truth and candour possess a powerful charm: they bespeak universal favour.

After the first departure from sincerity, it is seldom in our power to stop: one artifice generally leads on to another.

Temper the vivacity of youth, with a proper mixture of serious thought.

The spirit of true religion is social, kind, and cheerful.

Let no compliance with the intemperate mirth of others, ever betray you into profane sallies.

In preparing for another world, we must not neglect the duties of this life.

The manner in which we employ our present time, may decide our future happiness or misery.

Happiness does not grow up of its own accord: it is the fruit of long cultivation, and the acquisition of labour and care.

A plain understanding is often joined with great worth.

The brightest parts are sometimes found without virtue or honour.

How feeble are the attractions of the fairest form, when nothing within corresponds to them!
Piety and virtue are particularly graceful and becoming in youth.

Can we, untouched by gratitude, view that profusion of good, which the Divine hand pours around us?

There is nothing in human life more amiable and respectable, than the character of a truly humble and benevolent man.

What feelings are more uneasy and distressful, than the workings of sour and angry passions?

No man can be active in disquieting others, who does not, at the same time, disquiet himself.

A life of pleasure and dissipation, is an enemy to health, fortune, and character.

To correct the spirit of discontent, let us consider how little we deserve, and how much we enjoy.

As far as happiness is to be found on earth, we must look for it, not in the world, or the things of the world; but within ourselves, in our temper, and in our heart.

Though bad men attempt to turn virtue into ridicule, they honour it at the bottom of their hearts.

Of what small moment to our real happiness, are many of those injuries which draw forth our resentment!

In the moments of eager contention, every thing is magnified and distorted in its appearance.
Multitudes in the most obscure stations, are not less eager in their petty broils, nor less tormented by their passions, than if princely honours were the prize for which they contend.

The smooth stream, the serene atmosphere, the mild zephyr, are the proper emblems of a gentle temper, and a peaceful life. Among the sons of strife, all is loud and tempestuous.
CHAPTER II.

EXERCISES IN PARSEING, AS IT RESPECTS BOTH ETYMOLOGY AND SYNTAX.

SECTION I.

SECTION III.

EXERCISES ON THE FIRST, SECOND, THIRD, AND FOURTH RULES OF SYNTAX.*

1. The contented mind spreads ease and cheerfulness around it.

The school of experience teaches many useful lessons.

In the path of life are many thorns, as well as flowers.

Thou shouldst do justice to all men, even to enemies.

2. Vanity and presumption ruin many a promising youth.

Food, clothing, and credit, are the rewards of industry.

He and William live together in great harmony.

3. No age, nor condition, is exempt from trouble.

Wealth, or virtue, or any valuable acquisition, is not attainable by idle wishes.

4. The British nation is great and generous.

The company is assembled. It is composed of persons possessing very different sentiments.

A herd of cattle, peacefully grazing, affords a pleasing sight.

* In parsing these exercises, the pupil should repeat the respective Rule of Syntax, and show that it applies to the sentence which he is parsing.
SECTION IV.

EXERCISES ON THE FIFTH, SIXTH, SEVENTH, AND EIGHTH RULES OF SYNTAX.

5. The man, who is faithfully attached to religion, may be relied on with confidence.
   The vices which we should especially avoid, are those which most easily beset us.

6. They who are born in high stations, are not always happy.
   Our parents and teachers are the persons whom we ought, in a particular manner, to respect.
   If our friend is in trouble, we, whom he knows and loves, may console him.

7. Thou art the man who has improved his privileges, and who will reap the reward.
   I am the person, who owns a fault committed, and who disdains to conceal it by falsehood.

8. That sort of pleasure weakens and debases the mind.
   Even in these times, there are many persons, who, from disinterested motives, are solicitous to promote the happiness of others.
SECTION V.

EXERCISES ON THE NINTH, TENTH, ELEVENTH, AND TWELFTH RULES OF SYNTAX.

9. The restless, discontented person, is not a good friend, a good neighbour, or a good subject. The young, the healthy, and the prosperous, should not presume on their advantages.

10. The scholar's diligence will secure the tutor's approbation. The good parent's greatest joy, is, to see his children wise and virtuous.

11. Wisdom and virtue ennoble us. Vice and folly debase us. Whom can we so justly love, as them who have endeavoured to make us wise and happy?

12. When a person has nothing to do, he is almost always tempted to do wrong. We need not urge Charles to do good; he loves to do it. We dare not leave our studies without permission.
SECTION VI.

EXERCISES ON THE THIRTEENTH, FOURTEENTH, FIFTEENTH, SIXTEENTH, AND SEVENTEENTH RULES OF SYNTAX.

13. The business is, at last, completed; but long ago I intended to do it.
   I expected to see the king, before he left Windsor.
   The misfortune did happen; but we early hoped and endeavoured to prevent it.
   To have been censured by so judicious a friend, would have greatly discouraged me.

14. Having early disgraced himself, he became mean and dispirited.
   Knowing him to be my superior, I cheerfully submitted.

15. We should always prepare for the worst, and hope for the best.
   A young man, so learned and virtuous, promises to be a very useful member of society.
   When our virtuous friends die, they are not lost for ever: they are only gone before us to a happier world.

16. Neither threatenings, nor promises, could make him violate the truth.
   Charles is not insincere; and therefore we may trust him.

VOL. II.
17. From whom was that information received? To whom do that house, and those fine gardens, belong?

SECTION VII.

EXERCISES ON THE EIGHTEENTH, NINETEENTH, TWENTIETH, TWENTY-FIRST, AND TWENTY-SECOND RULES OF SYNTAX.

18. He and I commenced our studies at the same time. If we contend about trifles, and violently maintain our opinion, we shall gain but few friends.

19. Though James and myself are rivals, we do not cease to be friends. If Charles acquire knowledge, good manners, and virtue, he will secure esteem. William is respected, because he is upright and obliging.

20. These persons are abundantly more oppressed than we are. Though I am not so good a scholar as he is, I am, perhaps, not less attentive than he to study.

21. Charles was a man of knowledge, learning, politeness, and religion. In our travels we saw much to approve, and much to condemn.
22. The book is improved by many useful corrections, alterations, and additions.

She is more talkative and lively than her brother, but not so well informed, nor so uniformly cheerful.

SECTION VIII.

PROMISCUOUS EXERCISES IN SYNTACTICAL PARSING.

PROSE.

Dissimulation in youth, is the forerunner of perfidy in old age. Its first appearance is the fatal omen of growing depravity, and future shame.

If we possess not the power of self-government, we shall be the prey of every loose inclination that chances to arise. Pampered by continual indulgence, all our passions will become mutinous and headstrong. Desire, not reason, will be the ruling principle of our conduct.

Absurdly we spend our time in contending about the trifles of a day, while we ought to be preparing for a higher existence.

How little do they know of the true happiness of life, who are strangers to that intercourse of good offices and kind affections, which, by a pleasing charm, attaches men to one another, and circulates rational enjoyment from heart to heart!

If we view ourselves, with all our imperfections and failings, in a just light, we shall rather be surprised at our enjoying so many good things, than discontented, because there are any which we want.
True cheerfulness makes a man happy in himself, and promotes the happiness of all around him. It is the clear and calm sunshine of a mind illuminated by piety and virtue.

Wherever views of interest, and prospects of return, mingle with the feelings of affection, sensibility acts an imperfect part, and entitles us to small share of commendation.

Let not your expectations from the years that are to come, rise too high; and your disappointments will be fewer, and more easily supported.

To live long, ought not to be our favourite wish, so much as to live well. By continuing too long on earth, we might only live to witness a greater number of melancholy scenes, and to expose ourselves to a wider compass of human wo.

How many pass away some of the most valuable years of their lives, tossed in a whirlpool of what cannot be called pleasure, so much as mere giddiness and folly!

Look round you with attentive eye, and weigh characters well, before you connect yourselves too closely with any who court your society.

The true honour of man consists not in the multitude of riches, or the elevation of rank; for experience shows, that these may be possessed by the worthless, as well as by the deserving.

Beauty of form has often betrayed its possessor. The flower is easily blasted. It is shortlived at the best; and trifling, at any rate, in comparison with the higher and more lasting beauties of the mind.
A contented temper opens a clear sky, and brightens every object around us. It is in the sullen and dark shade of discontent, that noxious passions, like venomous animals, breed and prey upon the heart.

Thousands whom indolence has sunk into contemptible obscurity, might have come forward to usefulness and honour, if idleness had not frustrated the effects of all their powers.

Sloth is like the slowly-flowing, putrid stream, which stagnates in the marsh, breeds venomous animals, and poisonous plants; and infects with pestilential vapours the whole country round it.

Disappointments derange, and overcome, vulgar minds. The patient and the wise, by a proper improvement, frequently make them contribute to their high advantage.

Whatever fortune may rob us of, it cannot take away what is most valuable, the peace of a good conscience, and the cheering prospect of a happy conclusion to all the trials of life, in a better world.

Be not overcome by the injuries you meet with, so as to pursue revenge; by the disasters of life, so as to sink into despair; by the evil examples of the world, so as to follow them into sin. Overcome injuries, by forgiveness; disasters, by fortitude; evil examples, by firmness of principle.

Sobriety of mind is one of those virtues, which the present condition of human life strongly inculcates. The uncertainty of its enjoyments, checks presumption; the multiplicity of its dangers, demands perpetual caution. Moderation, vigilance, and self-government, are duties incumbent on all; but especially on such as are beginning the journey of life.

The charms and comforts of virtue are inexpressible; and can only be justly conceived by those who possess her. The consciousness of Divine approbation and support, and the steady hope of future happiness, communicate a peace and joy, to which all the delights of the world bear no resemblance.

If we knew how much the pleasures of this life, deceive and betray their unhappy votaries; and reflected on the disappointments in pursuit, the dissatisfaction in enjoyment, or the uncertainty of possession, which every where attend them: we should cease to be enamoured with these brittle and transient joys; and should wisely fix our hearts on those virtuous attainments, which the world can neither give nor take away.

POETRY.

Order is Heaven's first law: and this confess'd,
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest,
More rich, more wise; but who infers from hence,
That such are happier, shocks all common sense.

Needful austerities our wills restrain;
As thorns fence in the tender plant from harm.
Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence:
But health consists with temperance alone;
And peace, O virtue! peace is all thy own.

On earth naught precious is obtain'd,
But what is painful too;
By travel and to travel born,
Our Sabbaths are but few.

Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or failing, smiles in exile or in chains,
Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates, that man is great indeed.

Our hearts are fasten'd to this world
By strong and endless ties;
But ev'ry sorrow cuts a string,
And urges us to rise.

Oft pining cares in rich brocades are dress'd,
And diamonds glitter on an anxious breast.

Teach me to feel another's wo,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

This day be bread, and peace, my lot:
All else beneath the sun,
Thou know'st if best bestow'd or not,
And let thy will be done.
Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen:
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

If nothing more than purpose in thy pow'r,
Thy purpose firm, is equal to the deed:
Who does the best his circumstance allows,
Does well, acts nobly; angels could no more.

In faith and hope the world will disagree;
But all mankind's concern is charity.

To be resign'd when ills betide,
Patient when favours are denied,
And pleased with favours given;
Most surely this is Wisdom's part,
This is that incense of the heart,
Whose fragrance smells to Heaven.

All fame is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart:
One self-approving hour whole years outweighs
Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas;
And more true joy Marcellus exiled feels,
Than Cesar with a senate at his heels.

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life,
They kept the noiseless tenour of their way.
What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heartfelt joy,
Is virtue's prize.

Pity the sorrows of a poor old man,
Whose trembling limbs have borne him to your door,
Whose days are dwindled to the shortest span:
Oh! give relief, and Heaven will bless your store.

Who lives to nature, rarely can be poor:
Who lives to fancy, never can be rich.

When young, life's journey I began,
The glitt'ring prospect charm'd my eyes;
I saw, along th' extended plain,
Joy after joy successive rise.

But soon I found 'twas all a dream:
And learn'd the fond pursuit to shun,
Where few can reach the purposed aim,
And thousands daily are undone.

'Tis greatly wise to talk with our past hours;
And ask them, what report they bore to Heaven.

All nature is but art unknown to thee;
All chance, direction which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good.

Heaven's choice is safer than our own:
Of ages past inquire,
What the most formidable fate;
"To have our own desire."
SECTION IX.

MODE OF VERBALLY CORRECTING ERRONEOUS SENTENCES. *

When all the Exercises have been regularly corrected, in writing, it would tend to perfect the student's knowledge of the Rules, and to give him an habitual dexterity in applying them, if he were occasionally to correct, verbally, erroneous sentences purposely selected from different parts of the book; to recite the rules by which they are governed; and, in his own language, to detail the reasons on which the corrections are founded. The following examples will afford some idea of the manner in which the verbal corrections are to be made. They may also serve to give a radical knowledge of some of the principal Rules of Syntax.

"The man is prudent which speaks little."

This sentence is incorrect; because which is a pronoun of the neuter gender, and does not agree in gender with its antecedent man, which is masculine. But a pronoun should agree with its

* If any student wishes to see a general guide, and set of directions, respecting the mode of Parsing, and using the Exercises, from the commencement to the conclusion of his grammatical studies, he may find them at pages 9, 10, and 11, of the English Exercises in Duodecimo. They are not, in all respects, adapted to the Octavo edition of the Grammar, and the objects which the Author has in view.

Though the Key to the Exercises will be found, in many instances, of considerable use, and sometimes indispensable, it should, on no occasion, be consulted, till the sentence which is to be rectified, has been well considered, and has received the student's best correction.
antecedent in gender, &c., according to the fifth Rule of Syntax. Which should therefore be who, a relative pronoun, agreeing with its antecedent man; and the sentence should stand thus: "The man is prudent who speaks little."

"After I visited Europe, I returned to America."

This sentence is not correct; because the verb visited is in the imperfect tense, and yet used here to express an action, not only past, but prior to the time referred to by the verb returned, to which it relates. By the thirteenth Rule of Syntax, when verbs are used that, in point of time, relate to each other, the order of time should be observed. The imperfect tense visited, should therefore have been had visited, in the pluperfect tense, representing the action of visiting, not only as past, but also as prior to the time of returning. The sentence corrected would stand thus: "After I had visited Europe, I returned to America."

"I have seen the Museum last week; at least, I have seen it lately."

This sentence is irregular, and ungrammatical. The perfect tense, I have seen, when properly applied, refers to past time, with an allusion to the time present; that is, it comprehends a period which extends to the present time: and therefore it cannot accord with the expressions, last week, and lately, which refer to past time, exclusive of any relation to the time present. The time signified by these expressions is so clearly past, and so totally unconnected and inconsistent with the present period, that they cannot belong to a tense which has the definition of the perfect tense. The words, last week; and lately, correspond only with the imperfect tense; and therefore the sentence, in its true grammatical form, would stand thus: I saw the Museum last week; at least, I saw it lately."

"The number of persons, men, women, and children, which were lost in the sea, were very great."

This sentence violates the rules of grammar. The substantive number, though signifying many, suggests the idea of a whole or unity, and the assertion is made of it as such: the latter verb were, is therefore improperly put in the plural. The clause should be, "The number was very great." The pronoun which is also incorrectly applied. Its antecedents, persons, &c., are of the masculine and feminine gender. And therefore, as pronouns must agree with their antecedents in gender as well as number, the pronoun should be who instead of which; "who were lost."—At first view, the words, "The number of persons," appear to form conjointly the nominative to the verb: but this is not the case. The noun number is the prominent, leading object, to which the verb is attracted, and which supports the following adjuncts. These adjuncts are in the objective case, governed by the preposition of, and cannot therefore be nominatives. This appears from the last Note under the first Rule of Syntax.—The sentence in question, when fully corrected, would therefore be as follows: "The number of persons, men, women, and children, who were lost in the sea, was very great."

"He and they we own as our rulers; but who do you submit to?"

This is a very inaccurate sentence. The pronouns he and they, in the first member of it, are expressed as nominatives, without any verb or verbs, either mentioned or implied, to which they can relate; and they are not in the case absolute. The relative who, in the second member, is also in the nominative case, without any correspondent verb. The verb own is an active verb, and has for its objects the preceding pronouns: they should therefore be in the objective case, him and them, conformably to the eleventh Rule of Syntax, which declares, that "Active verbs govern the objective case." The relative who is the object of the preposition to, and consequently should be put in the objective case, whom, with the preposition before it: agreeably to the seventeenth Rule of Syntax, and the first Note under the Rule; which require the objective case after prepositions, and that this case should be preceded by the preposition. The whole sentence regularly expressed would be as follows: Him and them we own as our rulers; but to whom do you submit?"

"I know who he means."

This sentence is ungrammatical; because who is put in the nominative case, without any verb, expressed or understood, to which it can apply as such;
and because this relative being the object of the active verb means, ought to be in the objective case, according to the eleventh Rule of Syntax, which says, that "Active verbs govern the objective case." The sentence should therefore be expressed thus: "I know whom he means;" or, "I know the person whom he means."

"They were more learned than either him or her, but not more happy."

This sentence presents a very irregular construction. The pronouns him and her are in the objective case; though there is not any verb or other word in the sentence either expressed or implied, that requires these pronouns to be in the objective. They are not governed, as may appear at the first view, by the conjunction than: but they agree with the verb was, which is understood, and to which verb they form the nominative case; "more learned than either he or she was." In such sentences, if the word or words understood are supplied, the true construction will be apparent, agreeably to the twentieth Rule of Syntax. The whole sentence, when properly corrected, will therefore stand thus: "They were more learned than either he or she was, but not more happy."

"Their schemes defeated, and both him and them disgraced, they all retired from public notice."

This sentence violates the rules of grammar. The pronouns him and them are put in the objective case, without any verb, preposition, or other word, to require their being in that case. They are therefore to be considered as in the nominative case; and as, in this case, they have no personal tense of a verb, and are placed before a participle, independently on the rest of the sentence, they properly form the case absolute; according to the fifth Note under the first Rule of Syntax. The sentence then, when properly corrected, would be in the following form: "Their schemes defeated, and both he and they disgraced, they all retired from public notice."

"Who do you believe him to be?"

This is an incorrect sentence. The relative who is in the nominative case, without any verb, expressed or understood, to which it can refer; and there is no grammatical rule which requires it to be in the nominative. By the fourth Note, under the eleventh Rule of Syntax, the verb to be has the same case after it, in construction, as that which precedes it: and therefore who should be whom, because him is in the objective case, and the relative, in its true construction, follows the verb to be, and receives its influence. The verb believe governs the pronoun him in the objective case; and though the relative precedes the verb to be, in its place of the sentence, yet, in grammatical construction, it follows that verb; which will appear by changing the form of the sentence thus: "You believe him to be whom?" As the verb to be may be considered as a conductor of cases; and as the words preceding and following it, are in apposition to each other; these ideas may further show the propriety of putting the relative in the objective case. In the following corrected form of the sentence, the two words him and whom are put in apposition; that is, they refer to the same person, and are conducted by the verb to be: "Whom do you believe him to be?"

"Prudence, policy, nay, his own true interest, strongly recommends the line of conduct proposed to him."

This sentence is not grammatical. The verb recommends, in the singular number, supposes that the nominative, "his own true interest," is designed to be, not only particularly, but exclusively, referred to by the verb, as the only nominative to which it relates. But this is not the drift of the sentence. The writer intended to signify that prudence, policy, and interest, all recommended the line of conduct, but with a particular regard and emphasis with respect to interest. The passage, therefore, when properly corrected, would run thus: "Prudence, policy, nay, even his own true interest, recommend the line of conduct proposed to him."

"The officer with his guard are in full pursuit of the fugitives."

This is an incorrect sentence. By the verb being in the plural number, it is supposed that it has a plural nominative, which is not the case. The only nominative to the verb is, the officer: the words, his guard, are in the objective case, governed by the preposition with; and they cannot consequently form the nominative, or any part of it; for, according to the seventeenth Rule of Syntax, prepositions govern the objective case. The prominent subject, and the true nominative of the verb, and to which the verb peculiarly refers, is, the officer. And therefore the passage, when regularly expressed, will be as follows: "The officer, with his guard, is in full pursuit of the fugitives;" or, "The officer and his guard are in full pursuit of the fugitives."

"Not only his business, but his character also, have been impaired."

This is a construction, not according to the rules of grammar. The verb have, in the plural number, presupposes a plural nominative, which is not found in the sentence. The assertion is not made of business and character conjointly; but only of character. This is the prominent subject, and the point to which the writer peculiarly adverts, and to which he means to attract the reader's attention; and, therefore, the verb should correspond with it. The words, his business, are referred to incidentally, or as a circumstance supposed to be known; and which may properly be considered as having the verb belonging to it, separately understood. In this point of view, therefore, the sentence, when put into regular form, would run thus: "Not only his business, but his character also, has been impaired."

"The judge too, as well as the jury, were very severe."

This is an irregular and ungrammatical sentence. The verb is made plural, from an idea that the writer intended to make his assertion as applicable to the jury as to the judge, and to excite the reader's attention equally to both. But this was not his design. The intention evidently was to speak of the judge's severity, and to attract the reader's mind peculiarly to that assertion. The idea of the jury's being severe is hinted at, but placed as it were in the background: it is an incidental circumstance, supposed to be known; and may be considered in the nature of an adjunct to the chief subject, with the verb understood. The severity of the judge is the principal and prominent object of the sentence, and that to which the reader is expected to attend, as the main design of the writer. Under these views, the sentence, when corrected, would be in the following form: "The judge too, as well as the jury, was very severe."

"Charles intended to have purchased an estate in the summer of 1815."

This sentence violates the order of time, and the rule of grammar. The perfect of the infinitive is here, by the construction of the sentence, supposed to precede the intention: but this is impossible. The intention to purchase must necessarily have existed prior to the purchase; and the relative time of the two verbs should be expressed accordingly. Whether we suppose the meaning to be, that the intention existed in the summer of 1815, or that the purchase was to be made at that period, in either case the purchase must be considered as posterior to the intention. It is absurd to say, that Charles intended to do a thing, which, by the form of the verb in the past time of the infinitive, is supposed to have been done before the intention existed. In such sentences as that under consideration, whatever period of past time is assumed for the intention, the object to which the intention refers must, at that period, have been contemplated as future. Though both the intention and purchase are now past with respect to the present time, they were not so at the time referred to: and they must be viewed exactly in the same light, with respect to the true construction of the sentence, as if the intention to purchase now existed. No person would say, "I intend to have purchased an estate," instead of, "I intend to purchase it." The sentence in question would therefore, when properly corrected by the thirteenth Rule of Syntax, stand as follows: "In the summer of 1815, Charles intended to purchase an estate."

"Every thought and every desire, are known to the great Searcher of hearts."

This sentence is not grammatical. The verb are in the plural, requires a correspondent plural nominative, which is not found in the sentence. The pronoun every, in the two clauses of the sentence, is singular, and does not lose its nature, nor receive any modification, by repetition. How frequently soever it may be added to a different substantive, it is still the pronoun every, and retains its peculiar signification, which is, that, of many, it refers to each one of them all taken separately; as in the following sentences: "Every man, every woman, every child, every individual, was drowned;" "Every one of the men and women was lost."
conjunction does not alter the construction. Whatever number of nouns may be connected by a conjunction with the pronoun every, this pronoun is as applicable to the whole mass of the nouns as to any one of them: and therefore the verb is correctly put in the singular number, and refers to the whole separately and individually considered. In short, this pronoun so entirely coalesces with the nouns, however numerous and united, that it imparts its peculiar nature to them all, and makes the whole number correspond together, and require a similar construction. These views of the subject show, that the sentence in question, when properly corrected, would stand thus: "Every thought and every desire, is known to the great Searcher of hearts."—This correction is made agreeably to the note at page 322; and the construction forms one of the exceptions to the second Rule of Syntax.

"This was the cause, which first gave rise to such a barbarous practice."

This sentence is inaccurate. The words first and rise have here the same meaning; and the word such is not properly applied. This word signifies of that kind: but the author does not refer to a kind or species of barbarity. He means a degree of it: and therefore the word so, instead of such, ought to have been used. The words cause and gave rise, are also tautological: one of them should, consequently, be omitted. The sentence corrected would stand thus: "This was the original cause of so barbarous a practice;" or, "of a practice so barbarous."
PART II.

EXERCISES IN ORTHOGRAPHY.

CHAPTER I.

CONTAINING INSTANCES OF FALSE ORTHOGRAPHY
ARRANGED UNDER THE RESPECTIVE RULES.

RULE I.

Monosyllables ending with f, l, or s, preceded by a single vowel, double the final consonant: as, staff, mill, pass. The only exceptions are, of, if, as, is, has, was, yes, his, this, us, and thus.

See the Key, p. 281.

It is no great merit to spell properly; but a great defect to do it incorrectly.

Jacob worshiped his Creator, leaning on the top of his staff.

We may place too little, as well as too much, stress upon dreams.

Our manners should be neither gross, nor excessively refined.
RULE II.

Monosyllables ending with any consonant but f, l, or s, and preceded by a single vowel, never double the final consonant; excepting, add, ebb, butt, egg, odd, err, inn, bunn, purr, and buzz.

See the Key, p. 282.

A carr signifies a chariot of war, or a small carriage of burden.
In the names of drugs and plants, the mistake in a word may endanger life.

Nor undelightful is the ceaseless humm
To him who muses through the woods at noon.

The finn of a fish is the limb, by which he balances his body, and moves in the water.
Many a trapp is laid to insnare the feet of youth.
Many thousand families are supported by the simple business of making mats.

RULE III.

Words, ending with y, preceded by a consonant, form the plurals of nouns, the persons of verbs, verbal nouns, past participles, comparatives, and superlatives, by changing y into i: as, spy, spies; I carry, thou carriest; he carrieth, or carries; carrier, carried; happy, happier, happiest.

The present participle in ing, retains the y, that i may not be doubled: as, carry, carrying; bury, burying.
ORTHOGRAPHY.

But y, preceded by a vowel, in such instances as the above, is not changed; as, boy, boys; I cloy, he cloys, cloyed: except in lay, pay, and say; from which are formed, laid, paid, and said, and their compounds, un laid, unpaid, unsaid, &c.

See the Key p. 282.

We should subject our fancys to the government of reason.

If thou art seeking for the living amongst the dead, thou wearyest thyself in vain.

If we have denied ourselves sinful pleasures, we shall be great gainers in the end.

We shall not be the happyer for possessing talents and affluence, unless we make a right use of them.

The truly good mind is not dismaied by poverty, afflictions, or death.

RULE IV.

Words ending with y, preceded by a consonant, on assuming an additional syllable beginning with a consonant, commonly change y into i: as, happy, happily, happiness. But when y is preceded by a vowel, it is very rarely changed in the additional syllable: as, coy, coyly; boy, boyish, boyhood; annoy, annoyed, annoyance; joy, joyless, joyful.

See the Key, p. 283.

It is a great blessing to have a sound mind, uninfluenced by fancyful humours.

Common calamities, and common blessings, fall heavily upon the envious.

The comeliness of youth are modesty and frankness; of age, condescension and dignity.
When we act against conscience, we become the destroyers of our own peace.

We may be playful, and yet innocent; grave, and yet corrupt. It is only from general conduct, that our true character can be portraied.

RULE V.

Monosyllables, and words accented on the last syllable, ending with a single consonant preceded by a single vowel, double that consonant, when they take another syllable beginning with a vowel: as, wit, witty; thin, thinnish; to abet, an abettor; to begin, a beginner.

But if a diphthong precedes, or the accent is on the preceding syllable, the consonant remains single: as, to toil, toiling; to offer, an offering; maid, maiden.

See the Key, p. 283.

When we bring the lawmaker into contempt, we have in effect annulled his laws.

By deferring our repentance, we accumulate our sorrows.

The pupils of a certain ancient philosopher, were not, during their first years of study, permitted to ask any questions.

We all have many failings and lapses to lament and recover.

There is no affliction with which we are visited, that may not be improved to our advantage.

The Christian Lawgiver has prohibited many things, which the heathen philosophers allowed.
RULE VI.

Words ending with any double letter but l, and taking ness, less, ly, or ful, after them, preserve the letter double: as, harmlessness, carelessness, carelessly, stiffly, successful, distressful. But those words which end with double l, and take ness, less, ly, or ful, after them, generally omit one l: as, fulness, skillless, fully, skillful.

See the Key, p. 284.

Restlessness of mind disqualifies us, both for the enjoyment of peace, and the performance of our duty.

The arrows of calumny fall harmlessly at the feet of virtue.

The road to the blissful regions, is as open to the peasant as to the king.

A chillness, or shivering of the body, generally precedes a fever.

To recommend virtue to others, our lights must shine brightly, not dullly.

The silent stranger stood amazed to see
Contempt of wealth, and willful poverty.

RULE VII.

Ness, less, ly, and ful, added to words ending with silent e, do not cut it off; as, paleness, guileless, closely, peaceful: except in a few words; as, duly, truly, awful.

See the Key, p. 284.

The warmth of disputation, destroys that sedateness of mind which is necessary to discover truth.
EXERCISES.

All these with ceaseless praise his works behold,
Both day and night.

In all our reasonings, our minds should be sincerely employed in the pursuit of truth.
Rude behaviour, and indecent language, are peccularly disgracful to youth of education.
The true worship of God is an important and aweful service.
Wisdom alone is truely fair: folly only appears so.

RULE VIII.

Ment, added to words ending with silent e, generally preserves the e from elision: as, abatement, chastisement, incitement. The words judgment, abridgment, acknowledgment, lodgment, and argument, are deviations from the rule.

Like other terminations, ment changes y into i, when preceded by a consonant: as, accompany, accompaniment; merry, merriment.

See the Key, p. 285.

The study of the English language is making daily advancment.
A judicious arrangement of studies facilitates improvment.

To shun allurments is not hard,
To minds resolved, forewarn’d, and well prepared.
RULE IX.

Able and ible, when incorporated into words ending with silent e, almost always cut it off: as, blame, blamable; cure, curable; sense, sensible. But if c or g soft comes before e in the original word, the e is preserved in words compounded with able: as, change, changeable; peace, peaceable.

See the Key, p. 285.

Every person and thing connected with self, is apt to appear good and desireable in our eyes.

Errors and misconduct are more excuseable in ignorant, than in well-instructed persons.

The divine laws are not reverseible by those of men.

Gratitude is a forceible and active principle in good and generous minds.

Our natural and involuntary defects of body, are not chargable upon us.

We are made to be servicable to others, as well as to ourselves.

RULE X.

When ing or ish is added to words ending with silent e, the e is almost universally omitted: as, place, placing; lodge, lodging; slave, slavish; prude, prudish.

See the Key, p. 286.

An obliging and humble disposition, is totally unconnected with a servile and cringing humour.
EXERCISES.

By solacing the sorrows of others, the heart is improved, at the same time that our duty is performed.

Labour and expense are lost upon a droneish spirit.

The inadvertences of youth may be excused; but knaveish tricks should meet with severe reproof.

RULE XI.

Compounded words are generally spelled in the same manner, as the simple words of which they are formed: as, glasshouse, skylight, thereby, hereafter. Many words ending with double 1, are exceptions to this rule: as, already, welfare, wilful, fulfil; and also the words, wherever, Christmas, Lammas, &c.

See the Key, p. 286.

The pasover was a celebrated feast among the Jews.

A virtuous woman looketh well to the ways of her household.

These people salute one another, by touching the top of their foreheads.

That which is sometimes expedient, is not always so.

We may be hurtfull to others, by our example, as well as by personal injuries.

In candid minds, truth finds an entrance, and a welcome too.

Our passtimes should be innocent; and they should not occur too frequently.
CHAPTER II.

CONTAINING INSTANCES OF FALSE ORTHOGRAPHY, PROMISCUOUSLY DISPOSED.

See the Key, p. 287.

As the learners must be supposed to be tolerably versed in the spelling of words in very familiar use, the compiler has generally selected, for the following exercises, such words as are less obviously erroneous, and in the use of which young persons are more likely to commit mistakes. Though the instances which he gives of these deviations are not very numerous, yet, it is presumed, they are exhibited with sufficient variety, to show the necessity of care and attention in combining letters and syllables; and to excite the ingenious student to investigate the principles and rules of our Orthography, as well as to distinguish the exceptions and variations which every where attend them.

In rectifying these exercises, the compiler has been governed by Dr. Johnson's Dictionary as the standard of propriety. This work is, indisputably, the best authority for the Orthography of the English language; though the author, in some instances, has made decisions which are not generally approved, and for which it is not easy to account.

6. If thou had succeeded, perhaps thou wouldst not be the happier for it.

Unless thou shall see the propriety of the measure, we shall not desire thy support.

Though thou will not acknowledge, thou canst not deny, the fact.

VOL. II.
7. If thou gave liberally, thou wilt receive a liberal reward.

Though thou did injure him, he harbours no resentment.

It would be well, if the report was only the misrepresentation of her enemies.

Was he ever so great and opulent, this conduct would debase him.

Was I to enumerate all her virtues, it would look like flattery.

Though I was perfect, yet would I not presume.

8. If thou may share in his labours, be thankful, and do it cheerfully.

Unless thou can fairly support the cause, give it up honourably.

Though thou might have foreseen the danger, thou couldst not have avoided it.

If thou could convince him, he would not act accordingly.

If thou would improve in knowledge, be diligent.

Unless thou should make a timely retreat, the danger will be unavoidable.

I have laboured and wearied myself, that thou may be at ease.

He enlarged on those dangers, that thou should avoid them.

9. Neither the cold or the fervid, but characters uniformly warm, are formed for friendship.
They are both praiseworthy, and one is equally deserving as the other.

He is not as diligent and learned as his brother.

I will present it to him myself, or direct it to be given to him.

Neither despise or oppose what you do not understand.

The house is not as commodious as we expected it would be.

I must, however, be so candid to own I have been mistaken.

There was something so amiable, and yet so piercing, in his look, as affected me at once with love and terror.

I gain'd a son;

And such a son, as all men hail'd me happy.

The dog in the manger would not eat the hay himself, nor suffer the ox to eat it.

As far as I am able to judge, the book is well written.

We should faithfully perform the trust committed to us, or ingenuously relinquish the charge.

He is not as eminent, and as much esteemed, as he thinks himself to be.

The work is a dull performance; and is neither capable of pleasing the understanding, or the imagination.

There is no condition so secure, as cannot admit of change.
This is an event, which nobody presumes upon, or is so sanguine to hope for.

We are generally pleased with any little accomplishments of body or mind.

10. Be ready to succour such persons who need your assistance.

The matter was no sooner proposed, but he privately withdrew to consider it.

He has too much sense and prudence than to become a dupe to such artifices.

It is not sufficient that our conduct, as far as it respects others, appears to be unexceptionable.

The resolution was not the less fixed, that the secret was as yet communicated to very few.

He opposed the most remarkable corruptions of the church of Rome, so as that his doctrines were embraced by great numbers.

He gained nothing further by his speech, but only to be commended for his eloquence.

He has little more of the scholar besides the name.

He has little of the scholar than the name.

They had no sooner risen, but they applied themselves to their studies.

From no other institution, besides the admirable one of juries, could so great a benefit be expected.

Those savage people seemed to have no other element but war.
Such men that act treacherously ought to be avoided.

Germany ran the same risk as Italy had done.

No errors are so trivial, but they deserve to be corrected.

I have great confidence in him, because that I have long known his integrity.

RULE XX.

When the qualities of different things are compared, the latter noun or pronoun is not governed by the conjunction than or as; but agrees with the verb, or is governed by the verb or the preposition, expressed or understood: as, "Thou art wiser than I;" that is, "than I am." "They loved him more than me;" that is, "more than they loved me." "The sentiment is well expressed by Plato, but much better by Solomon than him;" that is, "than by him."

In some respects, we have had as many advantages as them; but, in the article of a good library, they have had a greater privilege than us.

The undertaking was much better executed by his brother than he.

They are much greater gainers than me by this unexpected event.

They know how to write as well as him; but he is a much better grammarian than them.

Though she is not so learned as him, she is as much beloved and respected.

These people, though they possess more shining qualities, are not so proud as him, nor so vain as her.
The following examples are adapted to the Notes and Observations under Rule XX.

1. Who betrayed her companion? Not me.
Who revealed the secrets he ought to have concealed? Not him.
Who related falsehoods to screen herself, and to bring an odium upon others? Not me; it was her.
There is but one in fault, and that is me.
Whether he will be learned or no, must depend on his application.

2. Charles XII. of Sweden, than who a more courageous person never lived, appears to have been destitute of the tender sensibilities of nature.
Salmasius (and a more learned man than him has seldom appeared) was not happy at the close of life.

RULE XXI.
To avoid disagreeable repetitions, and to express our ideas in few words, an ellipsis, or omission of some words, is frequently admitted. Instead of saying, "He was a learned man, he was a wise man, and he was a good man;" we make use of the ellipsis, and say, "He was a learned, wise, and good man."
When the omission of words would obscure the sentence, weaken its force, or be attended with any impropriety, they must be expressed. In the sentence, "We are apt to love who love us," the word them should be supplied. "A beautiful field and trees;" is not proper language. It should be, "Beautiful fields and trees;" or, "A beautiful field and fine trees."

I gladly shunned who gladly fled from me.
And this is it men mean by distributive justice, and is properly termed equity.

His honour, interest, religion, were all embarked in this undertaking.

When so good a man as Socrates fell a victim to the madness of the people, truth, virtue, religion, fell with him.

The fear of death, nor hope of life, could make him submit to a dishonest action.

An elegant house and furniture, were, by this event, irrecoverably lost to the owner.

The examples which follow, are suited to the Notes and Observations under Rule XXI.

1. These rules are addressed to none but the intelligent and the attentive.

The gay and the pleasing are, sometimes, the most insidious and the most dangerous companions.

Old age will prove a joyless and a dreary season, if we arrive at it with an unimproved, or with a corrupted mind.

The more I see of his conduct, I like him better.

It is not only the duty, but interest, of young persons, to be studious and diligent.

2. These counsels were the dictates of virtue, and the dictates of true honour.

Avarice and cunning may acquire an estate; but avarice and cunning cannot gain friends.
EXERCISES.

A taste for useful knowledge, will provide for us a great and noble entertainment, when others leave us.

Without firmness, nothing that is great can be undertaken; that is difficult or hazardous, can be accomplished.

The anxious man is the votary of riches; the negligent, of pleasure.

3. His crimes had brought him into extreme distress, and extreme perplexity.

He has an affectionate brother, and an affectionate sister; and they live in great harmony.

We must guard against too great severity, and facility, of manners.

We should often recollect what the wisest men have said and written, concerning human happiness and vanity.

In the circumstances I was at that time, my troubles pressed heavily upon me.

He has destroyed his constitution, by the very same errors that so many have been destroyed.

5. He is temperate, he is disinterested, he is benevolent; he is an ornament to his family, and a credit to his profession.

Genuine virtue supposes our benevolence to be strengthened, and to be confirmed, by principle.

Perseverance in laudable pursuits, will reward all our toils, and will produce effects beyond our calculation.
It is happy for us, when we can calmly and deliberately look back on the past, and can quietly anticipate the future.

The sacrifices of virtue will not only be rewarded hereafter, but recompensed even in this life.

All those possessed of any office, resigned their former commission.

If young persons were determined to conduct themselves by the rules of virtue, not only would they escape innumerable dangers, but command respect from the licentious themselves.

Charles was a man of learning, knowledge, and benevolence; and, what is still more, a true Christian.

6. The temper of him who is always in the bustle of the world, will be often ruffled, and be often disturbed.

We often commend imprudently, as well as censure imprudently.

How a seed grows up into a tree, and the mind acts upon the body, are mysteries which we cannot explain.

Verily, there is a reward for the righteous! There is a God who judgeth in the earth.

7. Changes are almost continually taking place, in men and in manners, in opinions and in customs, in private fortunes and public conduct.

Averse either to contradict or blame, the too complaisant man goes along with the manners that prevail.
By this habitual indelicacy, the virgins smiled at what they blushed before.

They are now reconciled to what they could not formerly be prompted, by any considerations.

Censure is the tax which a man pays the public for being eminent.

Reflect on the state of human life, and the society of men, as mixed with good and with evil.

8. In all stations and conditions, the important relations take place, of masters and servants, and husbands and wives, and parents and children, and brothers and friends, and citizens and subjects.

Destitute of principle, he regarded neither his family, nor his friends, nor his reputation.

Religious persons are often unjustly represented as persons of romantic character, visionary notions, unacquainted with the world, unfit to live in it.

No rank, station, dignity of birth, possessions, exempt men from contributing their share to public utility.

9. Oh, my father! Oh, my friend! how great has been my ingratitude!

Oh, piety! virtue! how insensible have I been to your charms!

10. That is a property most men have, or at least may attain.

Why do ye that, which is not lawful to do on the sabbath day.
The showbread, which is not lawful to eat, but for the priests only.

Most, if not all the royal family, had quitted the place.

By these happy labours, they who sow and reap, will rejoice together.

RULE XXII.

All the parts of a sentence should correspond to each other: a regular and dependent construction, throughout, should be carefully preserved. The following sentence is therefore inaccurate: "He was more beloved, but not so much admired, as Cinthio." It should be, "He was more beloved than Cinthio, but not so much admired."

Several alterations and additions have been made to the work.

The first proposal was essentially different, and inferior, to the second.

In the reign of Henry II., all foreign commodities were plenty in England.

There is no talent so useful towards success in business, or which puts men more out of the reach of accidents, than that quality generally possessed by persons of cool temper, and is, in common language, called discretion.

The first project was to shorten discourse, by cutting polysyllables into one.

I shall do all I can, to persuade others to take the same measures for their cure, which I have.

The greatest masters of critical learning differ among one another.

Micaiah said, "If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the Lord spoken by me."

I do not suppose, that we Britons want a genius, more than the rest of our neighbours.

The deaf man, whose ears were opened, and his tongue loosened, doubtless glorified the great Physician.

Groves, fields, and meadows, are, at any season of the year, pleasant to look upon; but never so much as in the opening of the spring.

The multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace.

The intentions of some of these philosophers, nay, of many, might and probably were good.

It is an unanswerable argument of a very refined age, the wonderful civilities that have passed between the nation of authors, and that of readers.

It was an unsuccessful undertaking; which, though it has failed, is no objection at all to an enterprise so well concerted.

The reward is his due; and it has already, or it will hereafter, be given to him.

By intercourse with wise and experienced persons, who know the world, we may improve and rub off the rust of a private and retired education.

Sincerity is as valuable, and even more valuable, than knowledge.

No person was ever so perplexed, or sustained the mortifications, as he has done to-day.

The Romans gave, not only the freedom of the city, but capacity for employments, to several towns in Gaul, Spain, and Germany.

Such writers have no other standard on which to form themselves, except what chances to be fashionable and popular.

Whatever we do secretly, shall be displayed and heard in the clearest light.

To the happiness of possessing a person of so uncommon merit, Boethius soon had the satisfaction of obtaining the highest honour his country could bestow.

Time and chance happeneth to all men; but every person do not consider who govern those powerful causes.

The active mind of man never or seldom rests satisfied with their present condition, howsoever prosperous.

Habits must be acquired of temperance and of self-denial, that we may be able to resist pleasure, and to endure pain, when either of them interfere with our duty.

The error of resting wholly on faith, or on works, is one of those seductions which most easily misleads men; under the semblance of piety, on the one hand, and of virtue, on the other hand.

It was no exaggerated tale; for she was really in the sad condition that her friend represented her.

An army present a painful sight to a feeling mind.

The enemies who we have most to fear, are those of our own hearts.

Thou art the Messiah, the Son of God, who was to come into the world, and hast been so long promised and desired.
Thomas disposition is better than his brothers; and he appears to be the happiest man: but some degree of trouble is all men's portion.

Though remorse sleep sometimes during prosperity, it will awake surely in adversity.

It is an invariable law to our present condition, that every pleasure that are pursued to excess, convert themselves into poison.

If a man brings into the solitary retreat of age, a vacant, an unimproved mind, where no knowledge dawns, no ideas rise, which within itself has nothing to feed upon, many a heavy and many a comfortless day he must necessarily pass.

I cannot yield to such dishonourable conduct, neither at the present moment of difficulty, nor, I trust, under no circumstance whatever.

Themistocles concealed the enterprises of Pausanius, either thinking it base to betray the secrets trusted to his confidence, or imagined it impossible for such dangerous and ill concerted schemes to take effect.

Pericles gained such an ascendant over the minds of the Athenians, that he might be said to attain a monarchical power in Athens.

Christ did applaud the liberality of the poor widow, who he had seen casting her two mites in the treasury.

SECTION VII.

See the Key, p. 384.

CONSTANTINOPLE was the point, in which was concentrated the learning and science of the world.

Disgrace not your station, by that grossness of sensuality, that levity of dissipation, or that insolence of rank, which bespeak a little mind.

A circle, a square, a triangle, or a hexagon, please the eye by their regularity, as beautiful figures.

His conduct was equally unjust as dishonourable.

Though, at first, he begun to defend himself, yet, when the proofs appeared against him, he dared not any longer to contend.

Many persons will not believe but what they are free from prejudices.

The pleasure or pain of one passion, differ from those of another.

The rise and fall of the tides, in this place, makes a difference of about twelve feet.

Five and seven make twelve, and one makes thirteen.

He did not know who to suspect.

I had intended yesterday to have walked out, but I have been again disappointed.

The court of Spain, who gave the order, were not aware of the consequence.
If the acquisitions he has made, and qualified him to be a useful member of society, should have been misapplied, he will be highly culpable.

There was much spoke and wrote on each side of the question; but I have chose to suspend my decision.

Was there no bad men in the world, who vex and distress the good, they might appear in the light of harmless innocence; but could have no opportunity for displaying fidelity and magnanimity, patience and fortitude.

The most ignorant, and the most savage tribes of men, when they have looked round on the earth, and on the heavens, could not avoid ascribing their origin to some invisible, designing cause, and felt a propensity to adore their Creator.

Let us not forget that something more than gentleness and modesty, something more than complacency of temper and affability of manners, are requisite to form a worthy man, or a true Christian.

One of the first, and the most common extreme in moral conduct, is placing all virtue in justice, or in generosity.

It is an inflexible regard to principle, which has ever marked the characters of them, who distinguished themselves eminently in public life; who patronised the cause of justice against powerful oppressors; in critical times, have supported the falling rights and liberties of men; and reflected honour on their nation and country.

When it is with regard to trifles, that diversity or contrariety of opinions show themselves, it is childish in the last degree, if this becomes the ground of estranged affection. When, from such a cause, there arise any breach of friendship, human weakness is then discovered in a mortifying light. In matters of serious moment, the sentiments of the best and worthiest might vary from that of their friends, according as their lines of life diverge, or as their temper, and habits of thought, presents objects under different points of view. But with candid and liberal minds, unity of affection still will be preserved.

Desires and wishes are the first spring of action. When they become exorbitant, the whole of the character is like to be tainted. If we should suffer our fancies to create to themselves, worlds of ideal happiness; if we should feed our imagination with plans of opulence and of splendour; if we should fix to our wishes certain stages of a high advancement, or certain degrees of an uncommon reputation, as the sole station of our felicity; the assured consequence shall be, that we will become unhappy under our present state; that we shall be unfit for acting the part, and for discharging the duties, that belong to it; and we shall discompose the peace and order of our minds, and shall foment many hurtful passions.

Maria always appears amiably. She never speaks severe or contemptuous.*

* Young persons who study grammar, find it difficult to decide, in particular constructions, whether an adjective, or an adverb, ought to be used. A few observations on this point, may serve to inform their judgment, and direct their determination. They should carefully attend to the definitions of the adjective and the adverb; and consider whether, in the case in question, quality, or manner, is indicated. In the former case, an adjective is proper; in the latter, an adverb. A number of examples will illustrate this direction, and prove useful on other occasions.

"She looks cold." "She looks coldly on him."

"He feels warm." "He feels warmly the insult offered to him."

"He became sincere and virtuous." "He became sincerely virtuous."

"She lives free from care." "He lives freely at another's expense."

"Harriet always appears neat." "She dresses neatly."

"Charles has grown great by his wisdom." "He has grown greatly in reputation."

"They now appear happy." "They now appear happily in earnest."

"The statement seems exact." "The statement seems exactly in point."

The verb to be, in all its moods and tenses, generally requires the word immediately connected with it to be an adjective, not an adverb; and, consequently, when this verb can be substituted for any other, without varying the sense or the construction, that other verb must also be connected with an adjective. The following sentences elucidate these observations. "This is agreeable to our interest;" "That behaviour was not suitable to his station;" "Rules should be conformable to sense;" "The rose is smells sweet;" "How sweet the hay smells!" "How delightful is the country appears;" "How pleasant the fields look!" "The are clouds look dark;" "How black the sky looked!" "The apple is tastes sour;" "How bitter the plums tasted!" "He feels happy." In all these sentences, we can, with perfect propriety, substitute some tenses of the verb to be for the other verbs. But in the following sentences we cannot do this: "The dog smells disagreeably;" "George feels exquisitely;" "How pleasantly she looks at us!"

The directions contained in this note are offered as useful, not as complete and unexceptionable. Anomalies in language everywhere encounter us: but we must not reject rules, because they are attended with exceptions.
PART IV.

EXERCISES IN PUNCTUATION.

CHAPTER I.

SENTENCES WHICH REQUIRE THE APPLICATION OF THE COMMA, DISPOSED UNDER THE PARTICULAR RULES.

RULE I.

The tear of repentance brings its own relief. Manhood is disgraced by the consequences of neglected youth. Idleness is the great fomenter of all corruptions in the human heart. It is honourable to be a friend to the unfortunate. All finery is a sign of littleness. Slovenliness and indelicacy of character commonly go hand in hand. The friend of order has made half his way to virtue. Too many of the pretended friendships of youth are mere combinations in pleasure.
The indulgence of harsh dispositions is the introduction to future misery.
The intermixture of evil in human society serves to exercise the suffering graces and virtues of the good.

RULE II.

Gentleness is in truth the great avenue to mutual enjoyment.
Charity like the sun brightens all its objects.
The tutor by instruction and discipline lays the foundation of the pupil's future honour.
Trials in this stage of being are the lot of man.
No assumed behaviour can always hide the real character.
The best men often experience disappointments.
Advice should be seasonably administered.

RULE III.

Self-conceit presumption and obstinacy blast the prospect of many a youth.
In our health life possessions connexions pleasures there are causes of decay imperceptibly working.
Discomposed thoughts agitated passions and a ruffled temper poison every pleasure of life.
Vicissitudes of good and evil of trials and consolations fill up the life of man.
Health and peace a moderate fortune and a few friends sum up all the undoubted articles of temporal felicity.

We have no reason to complain of the lot of man or of the world's immutability.

RULE IV.

An idle trifling society is near akin to such as is corrupting.

Conscious guilt renders us mean-spirited timorous and base.

An upright mind will never be at a loss to discern what is just and true lovely honest and of good report.

The vicious man is often looking round him with anxious and fearful circumspection.

True friendship will at all times avoid a careless or rough behaviour.

Time brings a gentle and powerful opiate to all misfortunes.

RULE V.

The man of virtue and honour will be trusted relied upon and esteemed.

Deliberate slowly execute promptly.

A true friend unbosoms freely advises justly assists readily adventures boldly takes all patiently defends resolutely and continues a friend unchangeably.

Sensuality contaminates the body depresses the understanding deadens the moral feelings of the heart and degrades man from his rank in the creation.

Idleness brings forward and nourishes many bad passions.

We must stand or fall by our own conduct and character.

The man of order catches and arrests the hours as they fly.

The great business of life is to be employed in doing justly loving mercy and walking humbly with our Creator.

RULE VI.

This unhappy person had often been seriously affectionately admonished but in vain.

To live soberly righteously and piously comprehends the whole of our duty.

When thy friend is calumniated openly and boldly espouse his cause.

Benefits should be long and gratefully remembered.

RULE VII.

True gentleness is native feeling heightened and improved by principle.
The path of piety and virtue pursued with a firm and constant spirit will assuredly lead to happiness.

Human affairs are in continual motion and fluctuation altering their appearance every moment and passing into some new forms.

What can be said to alarm those of their danger who intoxicated with pleasures become giddy and insolent; who flattered by the illusions of prosperity make light of every serious admonition which their friends and the changes of the world give them?

RULE VIII.

If from any internal cause a man's peace of mind be disturbed in vain we load him with riches or honours.

Gentleness delights above all things to alleviate distress; and if it cannot dry up the falling tear to sooth at least the grieving heart.

Wherever Christianity prevails it has discouraged and in some degree abolished slavery.

We may rest assured that by the steady pursuit of virtue we shall obtain and enjoy it.

RULE IX.

Continue my dear children to make virtue your principal study.
To you my worthy benefactors am I indebted under Providence for all I enjoy.
Canst thou expect thou betrayer of innocence to escape the hand of vengeance?
Come then companion of my toils, let us take fresh courage persevere and hope to the end.

RULE X.

Peace of mind being secured we may smile at misfortunes.
Virtue abandoned and conscience reproaching us we become terrified with imaginary evils.
Charles having been deprived of the help of tutors his studies became totally neglected.
To prevent further altercation I submitted to the terms proposed.
To enjoy present pleasure he sacrificed his future ease and reputation.
To say the least they have betrayed great want of prudence.

RULE XI.

Hope the balm of life sooths us under every misfortune.
Content the offspring of virtue dwells both in retirement and in the active scenes of life.
Confucius the great Chinese philosopher was eminently good as well as wise.
The patriarch Joseph is an illustrious example of chastity resignation and filial affection.

RULE XII.

Nothing is so opposite to the true enjoyment of life as the relaxed and feeble state of an indolent mind.

The more a man speaks of himself the less he likes to hear another talked of.

Nothing more strongly inculcates resignation than the experience of our own inability to guide ourselves.

The friendships of the world can subsist no longer than interest cements them.

Expect no more from the world than it is able to afford you.

RULE XIII.

He who is a stranger to industry may possess but he cannot enjoy.

Contrition though it may melt ought not to sink or overpower the heart of a Christian.

The goods of this world were given to man for his occasional refreshment not for his chief felicity.

It is the province of superiors to direct of inferiors to obey; of the learned to be instructive of the ignorant to be docile; of the old to be communicative of the young to be attentive and diligent.
Though unavoidable calamities make a part yet they make not the chief part of the vexations and sorrows that distress human life.

An inquisitive and meddling spirit often interrupts the good order and breaks the peace of society.

RULE XIV.

Vice is not of such a nature that we can say to it "Hitherto shalt thou come and no further."

One of the noblest of the Christian virtues is "to love our enemies."

Many too confidently say to themselves "My mountain stands strong and it shall never be removed.

We are strictly enjoined "not to follow a multitude to do evil."

RULE XV.

The gentle mind is like the smooth stream which reflects every object in its just proportion and in its fairest colours.

Beware of those rash and dangerous connexions which may afterwards load you with dishonour.

Blind must that man be who discerns not the most striking marks of a divine government exercised over the world.
It is labour only which gives the relish to pleasure.

In that unaffected civility which springs from a gentle mind there is an incomparable charm.

They who raise envy will easily incur censure.

Many of the evils which occasion our complaints of the world are wholly imaginary.

He who is good before invisible witnesses is eminently so before the visible.

His conduct so disinterested and generous was universally approved.

RULE XVI.

The fumes which arise from a heart boiling with violent passions never fail to darken and trouble the understanding.

If we delay till to-morrow what ought to be done to-day we overcharge the morrow with a burthen which belongs not to it.

By whatever means we may at first attract the attention we can hold the esteem and secure the hearts of others only by amiable dispositions and the accomplishments of the mind.

If the mind sow not corn it will plant thistles.

One day is sufficient to scatter our prosperity and bring it to nought.

Graceful in youth are the tears of sympathy and the heart that melts at the tale of wo.
The ever active and restless power of thought if not employed about what is good will naturally and unavoidably engender evil.

He who formed the heart certainly knows what passes within it.

To be humble and modest in opinion to be vigilant and attentive in conduct to distrust fair appearances and to restrain rash desires are instructions which the darkness of our present state should strongly inculcate.

RULE XVII.

The greatest misery is to be condemned by our own hearts.

The greatest misery that we can endure is to be condemned by our own hearts.

Charles's highest enjoyment was to relieve the distressed and do good.

The highest enjoyment that Charles ever experienced was to relieve the distressed and to do good.

RULE XVIII.

If opulence increases our gratifications it increases in the same proportion our desires and demands.

He whose wishes respecting the possessions of this world are the most reasonable and bounded is likely to lead the safest and for that reason the most desirable life.

By aspiring too high we frequently miss the happiness which by a less ambitious aim we might have gained.

By proper management we prolong our time: we live more in a few years than others do in many.

In your most secret actions suppose that you have all the world for witnesses.

In youth the habits of industry are most easily acquired.

What is the right path few take the trouble of inquiring.

RULE XIX.

Providence never intended that any state here should be either completely happy or entirely miserable.

As a companion he was severe and satirical; as a friend captious and dangerous; in his domestic sphere harsh jealous and irascible.

If the spring put forth no blossoms in summer there will be no beauty and in autumn no fruit: so if youth be trifled away without improvement manhood will be contemptible and old age miserable.
RULE XX.

Be assured then that order frugality and economy are the necessary supports of every personal and private virtue.

I proceed secondly to point out the proper state of our temper with respect to one another.

Here every thing is in stir and fluctuation; there all is serene steady and orderly.

I shall make some observations first on the external and next on the internal condition of man.

Sometimes timidity and false shame prevent our opposing vicious customs; frequently expectation and interest impel us strongly to comply.
CHAPTER II.

SENTENCES REQUIRING THE INSERTION OF THE SEMICOLON AND COMMA.

That darkness of character where we can see no heart those foldings of art through which no native affection is allowed to penetrate present an object unamiable in every season of life but particularly odious in youth.

To give an early preference to honour above gain when they stand in competition to despise every advantage which cannot be attained without dishonest arts to brook no meanness and to stoop to no dissimulation are the indications of a great mind the presages of future eminence and usefulness in life.

As there is a worldly happiness which God perceives to be no other than disguised misery as there are worldly honours which in his estimation are reproach so there is a worldly wisdom which in his sight is foolishness.

The passions are the chief destroyers of our peace the storms and tempests of the moral world.

Heaven is the region of gentleness and friendship hell of fierceness and animosity.

The path of truth is a plain and a safe path that of falsehood is a perplexing maze.
Modesty is one of the chief ornaments of youth and it has ever been esteemed a presage of rising merit.

Life with a swift though insensible course glides away and like a river which undermines its banks gradually impairs our state.

The violent spirit like troubled waters renders back the images of things distorted and broken and communicates to them all that disordered motion which arises solely from its own agitation.

Levity is frequently the forced production of folly or vice cheerfulness is the natural offspring of wisdom and virtue only.

Persons who live according to order may be compared to the celestial bodies which move in regular courses and by stated laws whose influence is beneficent whose operations are tranquil.
CHAPTER III.

SENTENCES REQUIRING THE APPLICATION OF THE COLON, &c.

The three great enemies to tranquillity are vice superstition and idleness vice which poisons and disturbs the mind with bad passions superstition which fills it with imaginary terrors idleness which loads it with tediousness and disgust.

To sail on the tranquil surface of an unruffled lake and to steer a safe course through a troubled and stormy ocean require different talents and alas! human life oftener resembles the stormy ocean than the unruffled lake.

When we look forward to the year which is beginning what do we behold there? All my brethren is a blank to our view a dark unknown presents itself.

Happy would the poor man think himself if he could enter on all the treasures of the rich and happy for a short time he might be but before he had long contemplated and admired his state his possessions would seem to lessen and his cares would grow.

By doing or at least endeavouring to do our duty to God and man by acquiring an humble trust in the mercy and favour of God through Jesus Christ by cultivating our minds and properly employing our time and thoughts by governing our passions and our temper by correcting all unreasonable expectations from the world and from men and in the midst of worldly business habituating ourselves to calm retreat and serious recollection by such means as these it may be hoped that through the Divine blessing our days will flow in a stream as unruffled as the human state admits.

A metaphor is a comparison expressed in an abridged form but without any of the words that denote comparison as "To the upright there ariseth light in darkness."

All our conduct towards men should be influenced by this important precept "Do to others as you would that others should do to you."

Philip III, king of Spain when he drew near the end of his days seriously reflecting on his past life and greatly affected with the remembrance of his misspent time expressed his deep regret in these terms "Ah! how happy would it have been for me had I spent in retirement these twenty-three years that I have possessed my kingdom."

Often is the smile of gaiety assumed whilst the heart aches within though folly may laugh guilt will sting.

There is no mortal truly wise and restless at once wisdom is the repose of minds.
CHAPTER IV.

SENTENCES WHICH REQUIRE THE INSERTION OF THE PERIOD, &c.*

The absence of Evil is a real Good peace. Quiet exemption from pain should be a continual feast.

Wordly happiness ever tends to destroy itself. By corrupting the heart it fosters the loose and the Violent passions. It engenders noxious habits and taints the mind with false Delicacy which makes it feel a Thousand unreal Evils.

Feeding the hungry clothing the Naked comforting the afflicted yield more pleasure than we receive from those actions which respect only Ourselves. Benevolence may in this view be termed the most refined self-love.

The Resources of Virtue remain entire When the Days of trouble come they remain with us in Sickness as in Health in Poverty as in the midst of

As every learner is supposed to know, that the first word in a sentence must have a capital letter, there would be little exercise of his judgment, in applying the period, if no words were distinguished by capital letters, but such as propriety requires. The compiler has therefore, in this and the following chapters, affixed capitals to many words, which should properly begin with small letters. This method, besides the use chiefly intended, will serve to exercise the student in the proper application of capital letters.
Riches in our dark and solitary Hours no less than when surrounded with friends and cheerful Society. The mind of a good man is a kingdom to him and he can always enjoy it.

We ruin the Happiness of life. When we attempt to raise it too high a tolerable and comfortable State is all that we can propose to ourselves. On Earth peace and Contentment not Bliss nor Transport are the full Portion of Man. Perfect joy is reserved for Heaven.

If we look around us we shall perceive that the Whole Universe is full of Active Powers. Action is indeed the Genius of Nature. By Motion and exertion the System of Being is preserved in Vigour by its different parts always acting in Subordination one to another. The Perfection of the Whole is carried on. The Heavenly Bodies perpetually revolve day and Night incessantly repeat their appointed course. Continual operations are going on. In the Earth and in the Waters nothing stands still.

Constantine the Great was advanced to the sole Dominion of the Roman World A.D. 325 and soon after openly professed the Christian Faith.

The Letter concludes with this Remarkable Postscript "P S Though I am innocent of the Charge and have been bitterly persecuted yet I cordially forgive my Enemies and Persecutors."

The last Edition of that valuable Work was carefully compared with the Original MS.
CHAPTER V.

SENTENCES REQUIRING THE APPLICATION OF THE DASH; OF THE NOTES OF INTERROGATION AND EXCLAMATION; AND OF THE PARENTHETICAL CHARACTERS.

Beauty and Strength combined with Virtue and Piety how lovely in the sight of men how pleasing to Heaven peculiarly pleasing because with every Temptation to deviate they voluntarily walk in the Path of Duty

Something there is more needful than expense
And something previous e’en to taste ’tis sense

"I’ll live to-morrow" will a wise man say
To-morrow is too late then live to-day

Gripus has long been ardently endeavouring to fill his Chest and lo it is now full Is he happy and does he use it Does he gratefully think of the Giver of all good Things Does he distribute to the Poor Alas these Interests have no Place in his breast

What is there in all the pomp of the world the Enjoyments of Luxury the Gratification of Passion comparable to the tranquil Delight of a good Conscience

To lie down on the Pillow after a Day spent in Temperance in beneficence and in piety how sweet is it
We wait till to-morrow to be Happy alas Why not To-day shall we be younger Are we sure we shall be healthier Will our passions become fickle and our love of the world less

What shadow can be more vain than the life of a great Part of Mankind of all that eager and bustling Crowd which we behold on Earth how few discover the path of true Happiness How few can we find whose Activity has not been misemployed and whose Course terminates not in Confessions of Disappointment

On the one Hand are the Divine Approbation and immortal Honour on the other remember and beware are the stings of Conscience and endless Infamy

As in riper Years all unreasonable Returns to the Levity of Youth ought to be avoided an Admonition which equally belongs to both the Sexes still more are we to guard against those intemperate Indulgences of Pleasure to which the young are unhappily prone

The bliss of man could pride that blessing find
Is not to act or think beyond mankind

Or why so long in life if long can be
Lent Heaven a parent to the poor and me
CHAPTER VI.

PROMISCUOUS EXAMPLES OF DEFECTIVE PUNCTUATION.

See the Key, p. 407.

SECTION I.

Examples in Prose.

When Socrates was asked what man approached the nearest to perfect happiness he answered, That Man who has the fewest Wants.

She who studies her Glass neglects her Heart.

Between Passion and Lying there is not a Finger's breadth.

The freer we feel ourselves in the Presence of others the more free are they he who is free makes free.

Addison has remarked with equal Piety and Truth that the Creation is a perpetual Feast to the Mind of a good Man.

He who shuts out all evasion when he promises loves truth.

The laurels of the Warrior are died in Blood and bedewed with the Tears of the Widow and the Orphan.

Between Fame and true Honour a Distinction is to be made the former is a loud and noisy Applause the latter a more silent and internal Homage. Fame floats on the Breath of the Multitude Honour.
rests on the Judgment of the Thinking Fame may give Praise while it withholds Esteem true Honour implies Esteem mingled with respect The one regards Particular distinguished Talents the other looks up to the whole character

There is a certain species of religion if we can give it that Name which is placed wholly in Speculation and Belief in the Regularity of external Homage or in fiery Zeal about contested Opinions

Xenophanes who was reproached with being timorous because he would not venture his Money in a Game at Dice made this manly and sensible Reply I confess I am exceedingly timorous for I dare not commit an evil Action

He loves nobly I speak of Friendship who is not jealous when he has Partners of love

Our happiness consists in the Pursuit much more than in the Attainment of any Temporal Good

Let me repeat it He only is great who has the Habits of Greatness

Prosopopoeia or Personification is a Rhetorical Figure by which we attribute Life and Action to inanimate objects as the Ground thirsts for Rain the Earth smiles with Plenty

The proper and rational Conduct of Men with Regard to Futurity is regulated by two Considerations First that much of What it contains must remain to us absolutely Unknown Next that there are also Some Events in it which may be certainly known and foreseen

The Gardens of the World produce only deciduous flowers Perennial ones must be sought in the Delightful Regions Above Roses without Thorns are the Growth of Paradise alone

How many Rules and maxims of Life might be spared could we fix a principle of Virtue within and inscribe the living Sentiment of the Love of God in the affections He who loves righteousness is Master of all the distinctions in Morality

He who from the Benignity of his Nature erected this World for the abode of Men He who furnished it so richly for our accommodation and stored it with so much Beauty for our Entertainment He who since first we entered into Life has followed us with such a Variety of Mercies this Amiable and Beneficent Being surely can have no pleasure in our Disappointment and Distress He knows our Frame he remembers we are dust and looks to frail Man we are assured with such Pity as a Father bears to his children

One of the first Lessons both of Religion and of Wisdom is to moderate our Expectations and Hopes and not to set forth on the Voyage of Life like Men who expect to be always carried forward with a favourable Gale Let us be satisfied if the Path we tread be easy and smooth though it be not strewed with Flowers

Providence never intended that the Art of living happily in this World should depend on that deep Penetration that acute sagacity and those Refinements of Thought which few possess it has dealt more graciously with us and made happiness depend on Uprightness of Intention much more than on Extent of Capacity.

Most of our Passions flatter us in their Rise. But their Beginnings are treacherous, their Growth is imperceptible and the Evils which they carry in their Train lie concealed until their Dominion is established. What Solomon says of one of them holds true of them all that their Beginning is as When one letteth out Water it issues from a small Chink which once might have been easily stopped but being neglected it is soon widened by the Stream till the Bank is at last totally thrown down and the Flood is at Liberty to deluge the whole plain.

Prosperity debilitates instead of strengthening the Mind. Its most common effect is to create an extreme sensibility to the slightest Wound. It foments impatient Desires and raises Expectations which no Success can satisfy. It fosters a false Delicacy which sickens in the midst of Indulgence by repeated Gratification. It blunts the feelings of Men to what is pleasing and leaves them unhappily acute to whatever is uneasy. Hence the Gale which another would scarcely feel is to the prosperous a rude Tempest. Hence the Rose-leaf doubled below them on the Couch as it is told of the effeminate Sybarite breaks their Rest. Hence the Disrespect shown by Mordecai preyed with such Violence on the Heart of Haman.

Anxiety is the Poison of Human Life. It is the Parent of many Sins and of more Miseries in a World where every thing is so doubtful where we may succeed in our Wish and be miserable where we may be disappointed and be blessed in the Disappointment what mean this restless Stir and Commotion of Mind Can our Solicitude alter the Course or unravel the Intricacy of Human Events Can our Curiosity pierce through the Cloud which the Supreme Being hath made impenetrable to Mortal Eye

No situation is so remote and no Station so unfavourable as to preclude access to the happiness of a future State A Road is opened by the Divine Spirit to those blissful Habitations from all Corners of the Earth and from all Conditions of Human Life from the peopled City and from the solitary Desert from the Cottages of the Poor and from the Palaces of Kings from the Dwellings of Ignorance and Simplicity and from the Regions of Science and Improvement

The Scenes which present themselves at our entering upon the World are, commonly flattering Whatever they be in themselves the lively Spirits of the Young gild every opening Prospect The Field of Hope appears to stretch wide Before them Pleasure seems to put forth its Blossoms On every Side Impelled by Desire forward they rush with inconsiderate Ardour prompt to decide and to choose averse to hesitate or to Inquire credulous because untaught by Experience rash because unacquainted with Danger headstrong because unsubdued by Disappointment Hence arise the Perils to which they are exposed and which too often from Want of Attention to faithful Admonition precipitate them into Ruin irretrievable

By the unhappy Excesses of irregular Pleasure in Youth how many amiable Dispositions are corrupted or destroyed how many rising Capacities and Powers are suppressed How many flattering Hopes of Parents and Friends are totally extinguished Who but must drop a Tear over Human Nature When he beholds that Morning which arose so bright overcast with such untimely Darkness that Sweetness of Temper which once engaged many Hearts that Modesty which was so prepossessing those Abilities which promised extensive Usefulness all sacrificed at the Shrine of low Sensuality and one who was formed for passing through Life in the midst of Public Esteem cut off by his Vices at the Beginning of his Course or sunk for the whole of it into Insignificance and Contempt These O sinful Pleasure are thy Trophies It is thus that co-operating with the Foe of God and Man thou degradest Human Honour and blastest the opening Prospects of Human Felicity
SECTION II.

Examples in Poetry.

Key, p. 413.

Where thy true treasure Gold says not in me
And not in me the Diamond Gold is poor

The scenes of business tell us what are men
The scenes of pleasure What is all beside

Wo then apart if wo apart can be
From mortal man and fortune at our nod
The gay rich great triumphant and august
What are they The most happy strange to say
Convince me most of human misery

All this dread order break for whom for thee
Vile worm O madness pride impiety

Man like the generous vine supported lives
The strength he gains is from th embrace he gives

Know nature's children all divide her care
The fur that warms a monarch warm'd a bear
While man exclaims see all things for my use
See man for mine replies a pamper'd goose
And just as short of reason he must fall
Who thinks all made for one not one for all

Th Almighty from his throne on earth surveys
None greater than an honest humble heart
An humble heart his residence pronounced
His second seat
Bliss there is none but unprecious bliss
That is the gem sell all and purchase that
Why go a begging to contingences
Not gain'd with ease nor safely lov'd if gain'd

There is a time when toil must be preferr'd
Or joy by mistimed fondness is undone
A man of pleasure is a man of pains

Thus nature gives us let it check our pride
The virtue nearest to our vice allied

See the sole bliss Heav'n could on all bestow
Which who but feels can taste but thinks can know
Yet poor with fortune and with learning blind
The bad must miss the good untaught will find

Whatever is is right This world is true
Was made for Cesar but for Titus too
And which more bless'd who chain'd his country say
Or he whose virtue sigh'd to lose a day

The first sure symptom of a mind in health
Is rest of heart and pleasure felt at home

True happiness resides in things unseen
No smiles of fortune ever bless the bad
Nor can her frowns rob innocence of joy

Oh the dark days of vanity while here
How tasteless and how terrible when gone
Gone they ne'er go when past they haunt us still Father of light and life Thou good supreme
O teach me what is good Teach me thyself
Save me from folly vanity and vice
From ev'ry low pursuit and feed my soul
With knowledge conscious peace and virtue pure
Sacred substantial never fading bliss

If I am right thy grace impart
Still in the right to stay
If I am wrong Oh teach my heart
To find that better way

Save me alike from foolish pride
Or impious discontent
At aught thy wisdom has denied
Or aught thy goodness lent

O lost to virtue lost to manly thought
Lost to the noble sallies of the soul
Who think it solitude to be alone
Communion sweet communion large and high
Our reason guardian angel and our God
Then nearest these when others most remote
And all ere long shall be remote but these _Benevolence._

God loves from whole to parts but human soul
Must rise from individual to the whole
Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake
As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake
The centre mov'd a circle straight succeeds
Another still and still another spreads
Friend parent neighbour first it will embrace
His country next and next all human race
Wide and more wide the overflowings of the mind
Take every creature in of every kind
Earth smiles around with boundless bounty bless'd
And Heaven beholds its image in his breast

_Happiness._

Know then this truth enough for man to know
Virtue alone is happiness below
The only point where human bliss stands still
And tastes the good without the fall to ill
Where only merit constant pay receives
Is bless'd in what it takes and what it gives
The joy unequal'd if its end it gain
And if it lose attended with no pain
Without satiety though ever so bless'd
And but more relish'd as the more distress'd
The broadest mirth unfeeling folly wears
Less pleasing far than virtue's very tears
Good from each object from each place acquire'd
For ever exercised yet never tired
Never elated while one man's oppress'd
Never dejected while another's bless'd
And where no wants no wishes can remain
Since but to wish more virtue is to gain Gratitude.

When all thy mercies O my God
My rising soul surveys
Transported with the view I'm lost
In wonder love and praise

O how shall words with equal warmth
The gratitude declare
That glows within my ravish'd heart
But thou canst read it there

Thy providence my life sustain'd
And all my wants redress'd
When in the silent womb I lay
And hung upon the breast

To all my weak complaints and cries
Thy mercy lent an ear
Ere yet my feeble thoughts had learnt
To form themselves in prayer

Unnumber'd comforts to my soul
Thy tender care bestow'd
Before my infant heart conceiv'd
From whom those comforts flow'd

When in the slippery paths of youth
With heedless steps I ran
Thine arm unseen convey'd me safe
And led me up to man

Through hidden dangers toils and death
It gently clear'd my way
And through the pleasing snares of vice
More to be fear'd than they
When worn with sickness oft hast thou
   With health renew'd my face
And when in sin and sorrow sunk
   Reviv'd my soul with grace

Thy bounteous hand with worldly bliss
   Has made my cup run over
And in a kind and faithful friend
   Has doubled all my store

Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
   My daily thanks employ
Nor is the least a cheerful heart
   That tastes those gifts with joy

Through every period of my life
   Thy goodness I'll pursue
And after death in distant worlds
   The glorious theme renew

When nature fails and day and night
   Divide thy works no more
My ever grateful heart O Lord
   Thy mercy shall adore

Through all eternity to thee
   A joyful song I'll raise
For O eternity's too short
   To utter all thy praise
The Voyage of Life.

Self flatter'd unexperienced high in hope
When young with sanguine cheer and streamers gay
We cut our cable launch into the world
And fondly dream each wind and star our friend
All in some darling enterprise embark'd
But where is he can fathom its event
Amid a multitude of artless hands
Ruin's sure perquisite her lawful prize
Some steer aright but the black blast blows hard
And puffs them wide of hope With hearts of proof
Full against wind and tide some win their way
And when strong effort has deserved the port
And tugg'd it into view tis won tis lost
Though strong their oar still stronger is their fate
They strike and while they triumph they expire
In stress of weather most some sink outright
Over them and over their names the billows close
To-morrow knows not they were ever born
Others a short memorial leave behind
Like a flag floating when the bark's ingulf'd
It floats a moment and is seen no more
One Cesar lives a thousand are forgot
How few beneath auspicious planets born
With swelling sails make good the promised port
With all their wishes freighted Yet even these Freighted with all their wishes soon complain
Free from misfortune not from nature free
They still are men and when is man secure
As fatal time as storm The rush of years
Beats down their strength their numberless escapes
In ruin end and now their proud success
EXERCISES.

[Promiscuous.

But plants new terrors on the victor's brow
What pain to quit the world just made their own
Their nests so deeply down'd and built so high
Too low they build who build beneath the stars.

EXERCISES TO PROMOTE PERSPICUOUS AND ACCURATE WRITING.

FIRST,

With respect to single words and phrases.

CHAPTER I.

CONTAINING VIOLATIONS OF THE RULES OF PURITY.

We should be employed daily in doing good.
It irks me to see so perverse a disposition.
I wot not who has done this thing.
He is no way thy inferior; and, in this instance, is no ways to blame.
The assistance was welcome, and timelily afforded.
For want of employment, he stroamed idly about the fields.
We ought to live soberly, righteously, and godlily, in the world.
He was long indisposed, and at length died of the hyp.
That word follows the general rule, and takes the penult accent.
He was an extra genius, and attracted much attention.
The hauteur of Florio was very disgraceous, and disgusted both his friends and strangers.
He charged me with want of resolution, in the which he was greatly mistaken.
They have manifested great candidness in all the transaction.
The naturalness of the thought greatly recommended it.
The importance, as well as the authenticalness, of the books, has been clearly displayed.
It is difficult to discover the spirit and intendment of some laws.
The disposition which he exhibited, was both unnatural and uncomfortable.
His natural severity rendered him a very unpopular speaker.
The disquietness of his mind, made his station and wealth far from being enviable.
I received the gift with pleasure, but I shall now gladlier resign it.
These are the things highliest important to the growing age.
It grieveth me to look over so many blank leaves, in the book of my life.
It repenteth me that I have so long walked in the paths of folly.

Methinks I am not mistaken in an opinion, which I have so well considered.

They thought it an important subject, and the question was strenuously debated pro and con.

Thy speech bewrayeth thee; for thou art a Galilean.

Let us not give too hasty credit to stories which may injure our neighbour: peradventure they are the offspring of calumny, or misapprehension.

The gardens were void of simplicity and elegance; and exhibited much that was glaring and bizarre.
CHAPTER II.

CONTAINING VIOLATIONS OF THE RULES OF PROPRIETY.

SECTION I.

Avoid low expressions.

I had as lief do it myself, as persuade another to do it.

Of the justness of his measures, he convinced his opponent, by dint of argument.

He is not a whit better than those whom he so liberally condemns.

He stands upon security, and will not liberate him till it be obtained.

The meaning of the phrase, as I take it, is very different from the common acceptation.

The favourable moment should be embraced; for he does not hold long in one mind.

He exposed himself so much amongst the people, that he had like to have gotten one or two broken heads.

He was very dexterous in smelling out the views and designs of others.

If his education was but a little taken care of, he might be very useful amongst his neighbours.
He might have perceived, with half an eye, the difficulties to which his conduct exposed him.

If I happen to have a little leisure upon my hands to-morrow, I intend to pay them a short visit.

This performance is much at one with the other.

The scene was new, and he was seized with wonderment at all he saw.

SECTION II.

Supply words that are wanting.

Let us consider the works of nature and art with proper attention.

He is engaged in a treatise on the interests of the soul and body.

Some productions of nature rise in value, according as they more or less resemble those of art.

The Latin tongue, in its purity, was never in this island.

For some centuries, there was a constant intercourse between France and England, by the dominions we possessed there, and the conquests we made.

He is impressed with a true sense of that function, when chosen from a regard to the interests of piety and virtue.

The wise and foolish, the virtuous and the vile, the learned and ignorant, the temperate and profligate, must often, like the wheat and tares, be blended together.

SECTION III.

_In the same sentence, be careful not to use the same word too frequently, nor in different senses._

An eloquent speaker may give more, but cannot give more convincing arguments, than this plain man offered.

They were persons of very moderate intellects, even before they were impaired by their passions.

True wit is nature dressed to advantage; and yet some works have more wit than does them good.

The sharks, who prey upon the inadvertency of young heirs, are more pardonable than those, who trespass upon the good opinion of those, who treat them with great confidence and respect.

Honour teaches us properly to respect ourselves, and to violate no right, or privilege, of our neighbour: it leads us to support the feeble, to relieve the distressed, and to scorn to be governed by degrading and injurious passions: and yet we see honour is the motive which urges the destroyer to take the life of his friend.

He will be always with you, to support and comfort you, and, in some measure, to succeed your labours; and he will also be with all his faithful ministers, who shall succeed you in his service.
SECTION IV.

Avoid the injudicious use of technical terms.*

Most of our hands were asleep in their berths, when the vessel shipped a sea, that carried away our pinnace and binnacle. Our dead-lights were in, or we should have filled. The mainmast was so sprung, that we were obliged to fish it, and bear away for Lisbon.

The book is very neatly printed: the scale-boarding is ample and regular, and the register exact.

SECTION V.

Avoid equivocal or ambiguous words.

When our friendship is considered, how is it possible that I should not grieve for his loss?

The eagle killed the hen, and eat her in her own nest.

* The examples in this section, and perhaps a few others in different parts of the book, may be too difficult for learners to correct without assistance: but as some illustration of the rules to which they relate, was requisite, they could not properly be omitted. By an attentive perusal of them, and a subsequent application to the teacher, or to the Key, the scholar will perceive the nature of the rule, and the mode in which similar errors may be rectified.
It may be justly said, that no laws are better than the English.

The pretenders to polish and refine the English language, have chiefly multiplied abuses and absurdities.

The English adventurers, instead of reclaiming the natives from their uncultivated manners, were gradually assimilated to the ancient inhabitants, and degenerated from the customs of their own nation.

It has been said, that not only Jesuits can equivocate.

You will not think that these people, when injured, have the least right to our protection.

Solomon, the son of David, who built the temple of Jerusalem, was the richest monarch that reigned over the Jewish people.

Solomon, the son of David, who was persecuted by Saul, was the richest monarch of the Jews.

It is certain that all words which are signs of complex ideas, may furnish matter of mistake and cavil.

Lisias promised to his father, never to abandon his friends.

The Divine Being heapeth favours on his servants, ever liberal and faithful.

Every well-instructed scribe, is like a householder, who bringeth out of his treasure things new and old.

He was willing to spend a hundred or two pounds, rather than be enslaved.
Dryden makes a very handsome observation, on Ovid's writing a letter from Dido to Æneas, in the following words.

Imprudent associations disqualify us for the instruction or reproof of others.

SECTION VI.

Avoid unintelligible and inconsistent words and phrases.

I seldom see a noble building, or any great piece of magnificence and pomp, but I think, how little is all this to satisfy the ambition, or to fill the idea of an immortal soul.

A poet, speaking of the universal deluge, says:

Yet when that flood in its own depth was drown'd,
It left behind it false and slipp'ry ground.

The author of the Spectator says, that a man is not qualified for a bust, who has not a good deal of wit and vivacity, even in the ridiculous side of his character.

And Bezaleel made the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the looking-glasses of the women.

And, in the lowest deep, a lower deep
Still threat'ning to devour me, opens wide.
SECTION VII.

Avoid all such words and phrases, as are not adapted to the ideas you mean to communicate; or which are less significant than others, of those ideas.

No less than two hundred scholars have been educated in that school.

The attempt, however laudable, was found to be impracticable.

He is our mutual benefactor, and deserves our respect and obedience.

Vivacity is often promoted, by presenting a sensible object to the mind, instead of an intelligible one.

They broke down the banks, and the country was soon overflowed.

The garment was decently formed, and sown very neatly.

The house is a cold one, for it has a north exposition.

The proposition, for each of us to relinquish something, was complied with, and produced a cordial reconcilement.

Though learn'd, well bred; and though well bred, sincere; Modestly bold, and humanly severe.

A fop is a risible character, in every one's view but his own.
An action that excites laughter, without any mixture of contempt, may be called a ridiculous action.

It is difficult for him to speak three sentences together.

By this expression, I do not intend what some persons annex to it.

The negligence of timely precaution was the cause of this great loss.

All the sophism which has been employed, cannot obscure so plain a truth.

Disputing should always be so managed, as to remember that the only end of it is truth.

My friend was so ill that he could not set up at all, but was obliged to lay continually in bed.

A certain prince, it is said, when he invaded the Egyptians, placed, in the front of his army, a number of cats and other animals, which were worshiped by those people. A reverence for these phantoms, made the Egyptians lie down their arms, and become an easy conquest.

The presence of the Deity, and the interest such an august cause is supposed to take in our concerns, is a source of consolation.

And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter set down among them.

By the slavish disposition of the senate and people of Rome, under the emperors, the wit and eloquence of the age were wholly turned into panegyric.
The refreshment came in seasonably, before they were laid down to rest.
We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen.
They shall flee as the eagle that hasteth to eat.
The wicked fly when no man pursueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion.

A creature of a more exalted kind
Was wanting yet, and then was man design'd.

He died with violence; for he was killed by a sword.
He had scarcely taken the medicine, than he began to feel himself relieved.
No place and no object appear to him void of beauty.
When we fall into a person's conversation, the first thing we should consider, is, the intention of it.
Galileo discovered the telescope; Harvey invented the circulation of the blood.
Philip found an obstacle to the managing of the Athenians, from the nature of their dispositions; but the eloquence of Demosthenes was the greatest difficulty in his designs.
A hermit is rigorous in his life; a judge, austere in his sentences.
A candid man avows his mistake, and is forgiven; a patriot acknowledges his opposition to a bad minister, and is applauded.
We have enlarged our family and expenses; and increased our garden and orchard.

By proper reflection we may be taught to mend what is erroneous and defective.

The good man is not overcome by disappointment, when that which is mortal passes away; when that which is mutable, dies; and when that which he knew to be transient, begins to change.
CHAPTER III.

CONTAINING VIOLATIONS OF THE RULES OF PRECISION.

This great politician desisted from, and renounced, his designs, when he found them impracticable.

He was of so high and independent a spirit, that he abhorred and detested being in debt.

Though raised to an exalted station, she was a pattern of piety, virtue, and religion.

The human body may be divided into the head, trunk, limbs, and vitals.

His end soon approached; and he died with great courage and fortitude.

He was a man of so much pride and vanity, that he despised the sentiments of others.

Poverty induces and cherishes dependence; and dependence strengthens and increases corruption.

This man, on all occasions, treated his inferiors with great haughtiness and disdain.

There can be no regularity or order in the life and conduct of that man, who does not give and allot a due share of his time to retirement and reflection.

Such equivocal and ambiguous expressions, mark a formed intention to deceive and abuse us.

His cheerful, happy temper, remote from discontent, keeps up a kind of daylight in his mind, excludes every gloomy prospect, and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity.
SECONDLY,

CHAPTER I.

CONTAINING SENTENCES IN WHICH THE RULES OF CLEARNESS ARE VIOLATED.

SECTION I.

In the position of Adverbs.

Hence the impossibility appears, that an undertaking managed so, should prove successful.

May not we here say with the poet, that "virtue is its own reward?"

Had he died before, would not then this art have been wholly unknown?

Not to exasperate him, I only spoke a very few words.

The works of art receive a great advantage from the resemblance which they have to those of nature; because here the similitude is not only pleasant, but the pattern is perfect.

It may be proper to give some account of those practices, anciently used on such occasions, and only discontinued through the neglect and degeneracy of later times.

Sixtus IV. was, if I mistake not, a great collector of books at least.

If Louis XIV. was not the greatest king, he was the best actor of majesty, at least, that ever filled a throne.

These forms of conversation, by degrees multiplied, and grew troublesome.

Nor does this false modesty expose us only to such actions as are indiscreet, but very often to such as are highly criminal.

By greatness, I do not only mean the bulk of any single object, but the largeness of a whole view.

I was engaged formerly in that business, but I never shall be again concerned in it.

We do those things frequently, which we repent of afterwards.

By doing the same thing, it often becomes habitual.

Most nations, not even excepting the Jews, were prone to idolatry.

Raised to greatness without merit, he employed his power for the gratification solely of his passions.

SECTION II.

In the position of circumstances, and of particular members.

The embarrassments of the artificers, rendered the progress very slow of the work.
He found the place replete with wonders, of which he proposed to solace himself with the contemplation, if he should never be able to accomplish his flight.

They are now engaged in a study, of which they have long wished to know the usefulness.

This was an undertaking, which, in the execution, proved as impracticable, as had turned out every other of their pernicious, yet abortive schemes.

He thought that the presbyters would soon become more dangerous to the magistrates, than had ever been the prelatical clergy.

Frederic, seeing it was impossible to trust, with safety, his life in their hands, was obliged to take the Mahometans for his guard.

The emperor refused to convert at once, the truce into a definitive treaty.

However, the miserable remains were, in the night, taken down.

I have settled the meaning of those pleasures of the imagination, which are the subject of my present undertaking, by way of introduction, in this paper; and endeavoured to recommend the pursuit of those pleasures to my readers, by several considerations: I shall examine the several sources whence these pleasures are derived, in my next paper.

Sir Francis Bacon, in his Essay on Health, has not thought it improper to prescribe to his reader a poem, or a prospect, where he particularly dissuades him from knotty and subtle disquisitions; and advises him to pursue studies that fill the mind with splendid and illustrious objects, as history, poetry, and contemplations of nature.

If the English reader would see the notion explained at large, he may find it in Locke's Essay on the Human Understanding.

Fields of corn form a pleasant prospect; and if the walks were a little taken care of, that lie between them, they would display neatness, regularity, and elegance.

Though religion will indeed bring us under some restraints, they are very tolerable, and not only so, but desirable on the whole.

I have confined myself to those methods for the advancement of piety, which are in the power of a prince, limited like ours, by a strict execution of the laws.

This morning, when one of the gay females was looking over some hoods and ribands, brought by her tirewoman, with great care and diligence, I employed no less in examining the box which contained them.

Since it is necessary that there should be a perpetual intercourse of buying and selling, and dealing upon credit, where fraud is permitted or connived at, or has no law to punish it, the honest dealer is often undone, and the knave gets the advantage.

Though energetic brevity is not adapted alike to every subject, we ought to avoid its contrary, on every occasion, a languid redundancy of words.
It is proper to be copious sometimes, but never to be verbose.

A monarchy, limited like ours, may be placed, for aught I know, as it has been often represented, just in the middle point; whence a deviation leads, on the one hand, to tyranny, and, on the other, to anarchy.

Having already shown how the fancy is affected by the works of nature; and afterwards considered, in general, both the works of nature and of art, how they mutually assist and complete each other, in forming such scenes and prospects as are most apt to delight the mind of the beholders; I shall, in this paper, throw together some reflections, &c.

Let but one great, brave, disinterested, active man arise, and he will be received, venerated, and followed.

Ambition creates seditions, wars, discords, hatred, and shyness.

The scribes made it their profession to teach, and to study, the law of Moses.

Sloth pours upon us a deluge of crimes and evils, and saps the foundation of every virtue.

The ancient laws of Rome were so far from suffering a Roman citizen to be put to death, that they would not allow him to be bound, or even to be whipped.

His labours to acquire knowledge have been productive of great satisfaction and success.

He was a man of the greatest prudence, virtue, justice, and modesty.
His favour or disapprobation was governed by the failure or success of an enterprise.

He did every thing in his power to serve his benefactor; and had a grateful sense of the benefits received.

Many persons give evident proof, that either they do not feel the power of the principles of religion, or that they do not believe them.

As the guilt of an officer will be greater than that of a common servant, if he prove negligent; so the reward of his fidelity will proportionably be greater.

The comfort annexed to goodness is the pious man's strength. It inspires his zeal. It attaches his heart to religion. It accelerates his progress; and supports his constancy.

SECTION III.

In the disposition of the relative pronouns, who, which, what, whose, and of all those particles which express the connexion of the parts of speech with one another.

These are the master's rules, who must be obeyed.

They attacked Northumberland's house, whom they put to death.

He laboured to involve his minister in ruin, who had been the author of it.

It is true what he says, but it is not applicable to the point.
The French marched precipitately as to an assured victory; whereas the English advanced very slowly, and discharged such flights of arrows, as did great execution. When they drew near the archers, perceiving that they were out of breath, they charged them with great vigour.

He was taking a view, from a window of the cathedral in Lichfield, where a party of the royalists had fortified themselves.

We nowhere meet with a more splendid or pleasing show in nature, than what appears in the heavens at the rising and setting of the sun; which is wholly made up of those different stains of light, that show themselves in clouds of a different situation.

There will be found a round million of creatures in human figure, throughout this kingdom, whose whole subsistence, &c.

It is the custom of the Mahometans, if they see any printed or written paper upon the ground, to take it up, and lay it aside carefully, as not knowing but it may contain some piece of their Alcoran.

The laws of nature are truly, what lord Bacon styles his aphorisms, laws of laws. Civil laws are always imperfect, and often false deductions from them, or applications of them; nay, they stand, in many instances, in direct opposition to them.

It has not a word, says Pope, but what the author religiously thinks in it.

Many act so directly contrary to this method, that, from a habit of saving time and paper, which they acquired at the university, they write in so diminutive a manner, that they can hardly read what they have written.

Thus I have fairly given you my own opinion, as well as that of a great majority of both houses here, relating to this weighty affair; upon which I am confident you may securely reckon.

If we trace a youth from the earliest period of life, who has been well educated, we shall perceive the wisdom of the maxims here recommended.
CHAPTER II.

CONTAINING SENTENCES IN WHICH THE RULES OF UNITY ARE VIOLATED.

SECTION I.

During the course of the sentence, the scene should be changed as little as possible.

A short time after this injury, he came to himself; and the next day, they put him on board a ship, which conveyed him first to Corinth, and thence to the island of Ægina.

The Britons, daily harassed by cruel inroads from the Picts, were forced to call in the Saxons for their defence; who consequently reduced the greater part of the island to their own power; drove the Britons into the most remote and mountainous parts; and the rest of the country, in customs, religion, and language, became wholly Saxons.

By eagerness of temper, and precipitancy of indulgence, men forfeit all the advantages which patience would have procured; and, by this means, the opposite evils are incurred to their full extent.

This prostitution of praise does not only affect the gross of mankind, who take their notion of characters from the learned; but also the better sort must, by this means, lose some part at least of their desire of fame, when they find it promiscuously bestowed on the meritorious and undeserving.

All the precautions of prudence, moderation, and condescension, which Eumenes employed, were incapable of mollifying the hearts of those barbarians, and of extinguishing their jealousy; and he must have renounced his merit and virtue which occasioned it, to have been capable of appeasing them.

He who performs every employment in its due place and season, suffers no part of time to escape without profit: and thus his days become multiplied; and much of life is enjoyed in little space.

Desires of pleasure usher in temptation, and the growth of disorderly passions is forwarded.

SECTION II.

We should never crowd into one sentence, things which have so little connection, that they would bear to be divided into two or three sentences.

The notions of lord Sunderland were always good; but he was a man of great expense.

In this uneasy state, both of his public and private life, Cicero was oppressed by a new and deep affliction, the death of his beloved daughter Tullia; which happened soon after her divorce from Dolabella; whose manners and humours were entirely disagreeable to her.
The sun approaching, melts the snow, and breaks the icy fetters of the main, where vast sea-monsters pierce through floating islands, with arms which can withstand the crystal rock; whilst others, that of themselves seem great as islands, are, by their bulk alone, armed against all but man, whose superiority over creatures of a size and force so stupendous, should make him mindful of his privilege of reason; and force him humbly to adore the great Composer of those wondrous frames, and the Author of his own superior wisdom.

I single Strada out among the moderns, because he had the foolish presumption to censure Tacitus, and to write history himself; and my friend will forgive this short excursion in honour of a favourite writer.

Boast not thyself of to-morrow; thou knowest not what a day may bring forth: and, for the same reason, despair not of to-morrow; for it may bring forth good as well as evil; which is a ground for not vexing thyself with imaginary fears; for the impending black cloud, which is regarded with so much dread, may pass by harmless; or though it should discharge the storm, yet before it breaks, thou mayst be lodged in that lowly mansion which no storms ever touch.
SECTION III.

We should keep clear of all unnecessary parentheses.

Disappointments will often happen to the best and wisest men, (not through any imprudence of theirs, nor even through the malice or ill design of others; but merely in consequence of some of those cross incidents of life, which could not be foreseen,) and sometimes to the wisest and best concerted plans.

Without some degree of patience exercised under injuries, (as offences and retaliations would succeed to one another in endless train,) human life would be rendered a state of perpetual hostility.

Never delay till to-morrow, (for to-morrow is not yours; and though you should live to enjoy it, you must not overload it with a burthen not its own,) what reason and conscience tell you ought to be performed to-day.

We must not imagine that there is, in true religion, any thing which overcasts the mind with sullen gloom and melancholy austerity, (for false ideas may be entertained of religion, as false and imperfect conceptions of virtue have often prevailed in the world,) or which derogates from that esteem which men are generally disposed to yield to exemplary virtues.
CHAPTER III.

CONTAINING SENTENCES IN WHICH THE RULES FOR PROMOTING THE STRENGTH OF A SENTENCE ARE VIOLATED.

SECTION I.

The first rule for promoting the strength of a sentence, is, to prune it of all redundant words and members.

It is six months ago, since I paid a visit to my relations.

Suspend your censure so long, till your judgment on the subject can be wisely formed.

The reason why he acted in the manner he did, was not fully explained.

If I were to give a reason for their looking so well, it would be because they rise early.

If I mistake not, I think he is improved both in knowledge and behaviour.

Those two boys appear to be both equal in capacity.

Whenever he sees me, he always inquires concerning his friends.

The reason of his conduct will be accounted for, in the conclusion of this narrative.

I hope this is the last time that I shall ever act so imprudently.
The reason of his sudden departure was on account of the case not admitting of delay.

The people gained nothing further by this step, but only to suspend their misery.

I have here supposed that the reader is acquainted with that great modern discovery, which is, at present, universally acknowledged by all the inquirers into natural philosophy.

There are few words in the English language, which are employed in a more loose and uncircumscribed sense, than those of the fancy and the imagination.

I intend to make use of these words, in the thread of my following speculations, that the reader may conceive rightly, what is the subject upon which I proceed.

Commend me to an argument that, like a flail, there is no fence against it.

How many are there, by whom these tidings of good news were never heard!

These points have been illustrated in so plain and evident a manner, that the perusal of the book has given me pleasure and satisfaction.

However clear and obvious the conduct which he ought to have pursued, he had not courage and resolution to set about it.

I was much moved on this occasion, and left the place full of a great many serious reflections.

They are of those who rebel against the light: they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.
This measure may afford some profit, and furnish some amusement.

By a multiplicity and variety of words, the thoughts and sentiments are not set off and accommodated: but, like David dressed out and equipped in Saul's armour, they are encumbered and oppressed.

Although he was closely occupied with the affairs of the nation, nevertheless he did not neglect the concerns of his friends.

Whereas, on the other hand, supposing that secrecy had been enjoined, his conduct was very culpable.

Less capacity is required for this business, but more time is necessary.

He did not mention Leonora, nor that her father was dead.

The combatants encountered each other with such rage, that, being eager only to assail, and thoughtless of making any defence, they both fell dead upon the field together.

I shall, in the first place, begin with remarking the defects, and shall then proceed afterwards to describe the excellences, of this plan of education.

Numberless orders of beings, which are to us unknown, people the wide extent of the universe.

His extraordinary beauty was such, that it struck observers with admiration.

Thought and language act and react upon each other mutually.
Their interests were dependent upon, and inseparably connected with each other.

While you employ all the circumspection and vigilance which reason can suggest, let your prayers, at the same time, continually ascend to Heaven for support and aid.

SECTION II.

The second rule for promoting the strength of a sentence is, to attend particularly to the use of connotatives, relatives, and all the particles employed for transition and connexion.

The enemy said, I will pursue, and I will overtake, and I will divide the spoil.

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold, heat, summer, winter, day and night, shall not cease.

A man should endeavour to make the sphere of his innocent pleasures as wide as possible, that he may retire into them with safety, and find in them such a satisfaction as a wise man would not blush to take. Of this nature are those of the imagination.

The army was composed of Grecians, Carians, Lycians, Pamphylians, and Phrygians.

The body of this animal was strong, and proportionable, and beautiful.

There is nothing which promotes knowledge more than steady application, and a habit of observation.
Though virtue borrows no assistance from, yet it may often be accompanied by, the advantages of fortune.

The knowledge he has acquired, and the habits of application he possesses, will probably render him very useful.

Their idleness, and their luxury and pleasures, their criminal deeds, and their immoderate passions, and their timidty and baseness of mind, have dejected them to such a degree, as to make them weary of life.

I was greatly affected, insomuch that I was obliged to leave the place, notwithstanding that my assistance had been pressingly solicited.

I strenuously opposed those measures, and it was not in my power to prevent them.

I yielded to his solicitation, whilst I perceived the necessity of doing so.

For the wisest purposes, Providence has designed our state to be checkered with pleasure and pain. In this manner let us receive it, and make the best of what is appointed to be our lot.

In the time of prosperity, he had stored his mind with useful knowledge, with good principles, and virtuous dispositions. And therefore they remain entire when the days of trouble come.

He had made considerable advances in knowledge; but he was very young, and laboured under several disadvantages.
SECTION III.

The third rule for promoting the strength of a sentence is, to dispose of the capital word, or words, so that they may make the greatest impression.

I have considered the subject with a good deal of attention, upon which I was desired to communicate my thoughts.

Whether a choice altogether unexceptionable, has, in any country, been made, seems doubtful.

Let us endeavour to establish to ourselves an interest in Him, who holds the reins of the whole creation in his hands.

Virgil, who has cast the whole system of Platonic philosophy, so far as it relates to the soul of man, into beautiful allegories, in the sixth book of his Æncid, gives us the punishment, &c.

And Philip the Fourth was obliged, at last, to conclude a peace, on terms repugnant to his inclination, to that of his people, to the interest of Spain, and to that of all Europe, in the Pyrenean treaty.

It appears that there are, by a late calculation, upwards of twenty-six millions of inhabitants in Great Britain and Ireland.

Though persons of a virtuous and learned education, may be, and too often are, drawn by the temptations of youth, and the opportunities of a large fortune, into some irregularities, when they come forward into the great world, it is ever with reluctance and compunction of mind, because their bias to virtue still continues.

Were instruction an essential circumstance in epic poetry, I doubt whether a single instance could be given of this species of composition, in any language.

Some of our most eminent writers have made use of this platonic notion, as far as it regards the subsistence of our affections after death, with great beauty and strength of reason.

Men of the best sense have been touched, more or less, with these groundless horrors and presages of futurity, upon surveying the most indifferent works of nature.

He that cometh in the name of the Lord, is blessed.

Every one that puts on the appearance of goodness is not good.

And Elias with Moses appeared to them.

Where are your fathers? and do the prophets live for ever?

We came to our journey's end at last, with no small difficulty, after much fatigue through deep roads and bad weather.

Virgil has justly contended with Homer, the praise of judgment, but his invention remains yet unrivalled.

Let us employ our criticism on ourselves, instead of being critics on others.
Let us implore superior assistance, for enabling us to act well our own part, leaving others to be judged by Him who searches the heart.

The vehemence of passion, after it has exercised its tyrannical sway for a while, may subside by degrees.

This fallacious art debars us from enjoying life, instead of lengthening it.

Indulging ourselves in imaginary enjoyments, often deprives us of real ones.

How will that nobleman be able to conduct himself, when reduced to poverty, who was educated only to magnificence and pleasure?

It is highly proper that a man should be acquainted with a variety of things, of which the utility is above a child's comprehension; but is it necessary a child should learn every thing it behoves a man to know; or is it even possible?

When they fall into sudden difficulties, they are less perplexed than others in the like circumstances; and when they encounter dangers, they are less alarmed.

For all your actions, you must hereafter give an account, and particularly for the employments of youth.
The fourth rule for promoting the strength of sentences, is that a weaker assertion or proposition should never come after a stronger one; and that, when a sentence consists of two members, the longer should, generally, be the concluding one.

Charity breathes long-suffering to enemies, courtesy to strangers, habitual kindness towards friends.

Gentleness ought to diffuse itself over our whole behaviour, to form our address, and regulate our speech.

The propensity to look forward into life, is too often grossly abused, and immoderately indulged.

The regular tenour of a virtuous and pious life, will prove the best preparation for immortality, for old age, and death.

These rules are intended to teach young persons to write with propriety, elegance, and perspicuity.

Sinful pleasures blast the opening prospects of human felicity, and degrade human honour.

In this state of mind, every employment of life becomes an oppressive burthen, and every object appears gloomy.

They will acquire different views, by applying to the honourable discharge of the functions of their station, and entering on a virtuous course of action.
By the perpetual course of dissipation, in which sensualists are engaged; by the riotous revel, and the midnight, or rather morning hours, to which they prolong their festivity; by the excesses which they indulge; they debilitate their bodies, cut themselves off from the comforts and duties of life, and wear out their spirits.

SECTION V.

A fifth rule for promoting the strength of sentences, is, to avoid concluding them with an adverb, a preposition, or any inconsiderable word.

By what I have already expressed, the reader will perceive the business which I am to proceed upon.

May the happy message be applied to us, in all the virtue, strength, and comfort of it!

Generosity is a showy virtue, which many persons are very fond of.

These arguments were, without hesitation, and with great eagerness, laid hold of.

It is proper to be long in deliberating, but we should speedily execute.

Form your measures with prudence; but all anxiety about the issue divest yourselves of.

We are struck, we know not how, with the symmetry of any thing we see; and immediately acknowledge the beauty of an object, without inquiring into the particular causes and occasions of it.

With Cicero's writings, these persons are more conversant, than with those of Demosthenes, who, by many degrees, excelled the other; at least, as an orator.

SECTION VI.

A sixth rule relating to the strength of a sentence, is, that, in the members of a sentence, where two things are compared, or contrasted, with one another; where either a resemblance, or an opposition, is intended to be expressed; some resemblance, in the language and construction, should be preserved. For, when the things themselves correspond to each other, we naturally expect to find a similar correspondence in the words.

Our British gardeners, instead of humouring nature, love to deviate from it as much as possible.

I have observed of late the style of some great ministers, very much to exceed that of any other productions.

The old may inform the young; and the young may animate those who are advanced in life.

The account is generally balanced; for what we are losers on the one hand, we gain on the other.

The laughers will be for those who have most wit; the serious part of mankind, for those who have most reason on their side.

If men of eminence are exposed to censure on the one hand, they are as much liable to flattery on the other. If they receive reproaches which are not due to them, they likewise receive praises which they do not deserve.

He can bribe, but he is not able to seduce. He can buy, but he has not the power of gaining. He can lie, but no one is deceived by him.

He embraced the cause of liberty faintly, and pursued it without resolution; he grew tired of it, when he had much to hope; and gave it up, when there was no ground for apprehension.

There may remain a suspicion that we overrate the greatness of his genius, in the same manner as bodies appear more gigantic, on account of their being disproportioned and misshapen.

SECTION VII.

The seventh rule for promoting the strength and effect of sentences, is, to attend to the sound, the harmony, and easy flow, of the words and members.

Sobermindedness suits the present state of man. As conventiclers, these people were seized and punished.

To use the Divine name customarily, and without serious consideration, is highly irreverent.

From the favourableness with which he was at first received, great hopes of success were entertained.
They conducted themselves wilily, and insnared us before we had time to escape.

It belongs not to our humble and confined station, to censure; but to adore, submit, and trust.

Under all its labours, hope is the mind's solace; and the situations which exclude it entirely are few.

The humbling of those that are mighty, and the precipitation of persons who are ambitious, from the towering height that they had gained, concern but little the bulk of men.

Tranquillity, regularity, and magnanimity, reside with the religious and resigned man.

Sloth, ease, success, naturally tend to beget vices and follies.

By a cheerful, even, and open temper, he conciliated general favour.

We reached the mansion before noon. It was a strong, grand, Gothic house.

I had a long and perilous journey, but a comfortable companion, who relieved the fatigue of it.

The speech was introduced by a sensible preamble, which made a favourable impression.

The commons made an angry remonstrance against such an arbitrary requisition.

The truly illustrious are they who do not court the praise of the world, but who perform such actions as make them indisputably deserve it.

By the means of society, our wants come to be supplied, and our lives are rendered comfortable, as well as our capacities enlarged, and our virtuous affections called forth into their proper exercise.

Life cannot but prove vain to such persons as affect a disrelish of every pleasure, which is not both new and exquisite; measuring their enjoyments by fashion's standard, and not by what they feel themselves; and thinking that, if others do not admire their state, they are miserable.

By experiencing distress, an arrogant insensibility of temper is most effectually corrected, from the remembrance of our own sufferings naturally prompting us to feel for others in their sufferings: and if Providence has favoured us, so as not to make us subject in our own lot to much of this kind of discipline, we should extract improvement from the lot of others that is harder; and step aside sometimes from the flowery and smooth paths which it is permitted us to walk in, in order to view the toilsome march of our fellow-creatures through the thorny desert.

As no one is without his failings, so few want good qualities.

Providence delivered them up to themselves, and they tormented themselves.

From disappointments and trials, we learn the insufficiency of temporal things to happiness, and the necessity of goodness.
CHAPTER IV.

Instances of an Irregular Use of Figures of Speech.

No human happiness is so serene as not to contain any alloy.

There is a time when factions, by the vehemence of their own fermentation, stun and disable one another.

I intend to make use of these words in the thread of my speculations.

Hope, the balm of life, darts a ray of light through the thickest gloom.

The scheme was highly expensive to him, and proved the Charybdis of his estate.

He was so much skilled in the empire of the oar, that few could equal him.

The death of Cato has rendered the Senate an orphan.

Let us be attentive to keep our mouths as with a bridle; and to steer our vessel aright, that we may avoid the rocks and shoals, which lie everywhere around us.

At length Erasmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the priesthood and the shame,) Curb'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age, And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.
In this our day of proof, our land of hope,
The good man has his clouds that intervene;
Clouds that may dim his sublunary day,
But cannot conquer: even the best must own,
Patience and resignation are the columns
Of human peace on earth.

On the wide sea of letters, 'twas thy boast
To crowd each sail, and touch at every coast:
From that rich mine how often hast thou brought
The pure and precious pearls of splendid thought!
How didst thou triumph on that subject tide,
Till vanity's wild gust, and stormy pride,
Drove thy strong mind, in evil hour, to split
Upon the fatal rock of impious wit!

Since the time that reason began to bud, and put forth her shoots, thought, during our waking hours, has been active in every breast, without a moment's suspension or pause. The current of ideas has been always moving. The wheels of the spiritual engine have exerted themselves with perpetual motion.

The man who has no rule over his own spirit, possesses no antidote against poisons of any sort.
He lies open to every insurrection of ill humour, and every gale of distress. Whereas he who is employed in regulating his mind, is making provision against all the accidents of life. He is erecting a fortress into which, in the day of sorrow, he can retreat with satisfaction.

Tamerlane the Great, writes to Bajazet, emperor of the Ottomans, in the following terms. "Where

vol. II.
is the monarch who dares resist us? Where is the potentate who does not glory in being numbered among our attendants? As for thee, descended from a Turcoman sailor, since the vessel of thy unbounded ambition has been wrecked in the gulf of thy self-love, it would be proper that thou shouldst take in the sails of thy temerity, and cast the anchor of repentance in the port of sincerity and justice, which is the port of safety; lest the tempest of our vengeance make thee perish, in the sea of the punishment thou deservest."

It is pleasant to be virtuous and good; because that is to excel many others: it is pleasant to grow better; because that is to excel ourselves: it is pleasant to command our appetites and passions, and to keep them in due order, within the bounds of reason and religion; because this is empire: nay, it is pleasant even to mortify and subdue our lusts; because that is victory.
CHAPTER V.

VIOLATIONS OF THE RULES RESPECTING PERSPICUOUS AND ACCURATE WRITING, PROMISCUOUSLY DISPOSED.

See the Key, p. 465.

SECTION I.

What is human life to all, but a mixture, with various cares and troubles, of some scattered joys and pleasures?

When favours of every kind are conferred speedily, they are doubled.

He will soon weary the company, who is himself wearied.

He must endure the follies of others, who will have their kindness.

For the last years of man, the first must make provision.

Perpetual light-mindedness must terminate in ignorance.

In these, and in such like cases, we should, in our alms, generally suffer none to be witnesses, but Him who must see every thing.

The reason why he is so badly qualified for the business, is because he neglected his studies, and opportunities of improvement.

That Plutarch wrote lives of Demosthenes and Cicero at Chæronea, it is clear from his own account.

I wish to cultivate your further acquaintance.
He may probably make the attempt, but he cannot possibly succeed.

No pains were spared by his tutor, in order to his being improved in all useful knowledge.

In no scene of her life was ever Mary's address more remarkably displayed.

This was the cause which first gave rise to such a barbarous practice.

He craftily endeavoured, by a variety of false insinuations which he made use of, to turn the emperor to his purpose.

The beauty in the earth equals the grandeur in the heavens.

In health and vigour of body, and in the state of worldly fortune, all rejoice.

What passes in the hearts of men, is generally unknown to the public eye.

Many associations are united by laws the most arbitrary.

These instances may, it is hoped, be sufficient to satisfy every reasonable mind.

By such general and comprehensive rules as this, the clearest ideas are conveyed.

He determined not to comply with the proposal, except he should receive a more ample compensation.

There can be no doubt but that health is preferable to riches.

They declared to their friends, that they believed the perusal of such books had ruined their principles.
John's temper greatly indisposed him for instruction.

Vegetation is advancing constantly, though no eye can trace the steps of its gradation.

The reason of my consenting to the measure, was owing to his importunity.

I conceived a great regard for him, and could not but mourn for his loss.

The officer apprehended him, and confined him in his own house.

Charlotte, the friend of Amelia, to whom no one imputed blame, was too prompt in her vindication.

Men who are rich and avaricious, lose themselves in a spring; which might have cherished all around them.

I should prefer him to be rather of slow parts, than with a bad disposition.

As soon as Eugenius undertook the care of a parish, it immediately engrossed the whole of his attention.

The plan will at once contribute to general convenience, and add to the beauty and elegance of the town.

Together with the national debt, the greatest national advantages are also transmitted to succeeding generations.

Their intimacy had commenced in the happier period, perhaps, of their youth and obscurity.

His subject is precisely of that kind, which a daring imagination could alone have adopted.
This emperor conjured the senate, that the purity of his reign might not be stained or contaminated, by the blood even of a guilty senator.

It is a happy constitution of mind, to be able to view successive objects so steadily, as that the more may never prevent us from doing justice to the less important.

This activity drew great numbers of enterprising men over to Virginia, who came either in search of fortune, or of liberty, which was the only compensation for the want of it.

The erroneous judgment of parents, concerning the conduct of schoolmasters, has crushed the peace of many an ingenious man, who engaged in the care of youth; and paved the way to the ruin of hopeful boys.

SECTION II.

See the Key, p. 469.

The Greek doubtless is a language which is much superior, in riches, harmony, and variety, to Latin. Those three great genius's flourished in the same period.

He has made a judicious adaption of the examples to the rule.

This part of knowledge has been always growing, and will do so, till the subject be exhausted.

A boy of twelve years old may study these lessons. The servant produced from his late master an undeniable character.
I am surprised that so great a philosopher as you are, should spend your time in the pursuit of such chimeras.

The ends of a divine and human legislator, are vastly different.

Scarce had the "Spirit of Laws" made its appearance, than it was attacked.

His donation was the more acceptable, that it was given without solicitation.

This subject is an unwelcome intruder, affording but an uneasy sensation, and brings with it always a mixture of concern and compassion.

He accordingly draws out his forces, and offers battle to Hiero, who immediately accepted it.

James laid late in bed yesterday; and this morning he lays still later.

The reason of this strange proceeding, will be accounted for when I make my defence.

I have observed him often, and his manner of proceeding is thus: he enjoins first silence; and then, &c.

Having not known, or not considered, the subject, he made a very crude decision.

They all were deceived by his fair pretences, and they all of them lost their property.

It is above a year since the time that I left school.

He was guilty of such atrocious conduct, that he was deserted by his friends for good and all.

No other employment besides a bookseller suited his inclination.
Hereby I am instructed, and thereby I am honoured.

I pleaded my good intention; and after some time he assented thereto: whereby I entirely escaped all punishment.

This I am disposed to the rather, that it will serve to illustrate the principles advanced above.

From what I have said, you will perceive readily the subject I am to proceed upon.

These are points too trivial to take notice of. They are objects I am totally unacquainted with.

The nearer that men approach each other, the more numerous the points of contact in which they touch, and the greater their pleasures or pains.

Thus I have endeavoured to make the subject be better understood.

This is the most useful art of which men are possessed.

The French writers of sermons study neatness in laying down their heads.

There is not any beauty more in one of them than in another.

Study to unite with firmness of principle gentleness of manners, and affable behaviour with untainted integrity.

In that work, we are every now and then interrupted with unnatural thoughts.
Bating one or two expressions, the composition is not subject to censure.

To answer his purpose effectually, he pitched upon a very moving story.

I am not able to discover whether these points are any how connected.

These are arguments which cannot be got over by all the cavils of infidelity.

This matter I had a great mind to reply to.

I hope that I may not be troubled in future, on this, or any the like occasions.

It is difficult to unite together copiousness and precision.

Let us consider of the proper means to effect our purpose.

We must pay attention to what goes before, and immediately follows after.

The more that this track is pursued, the more that eloquence is studied, the more shall we be guarded against a false taste.

True believers of every class and denomination on earth, make up the church and people of God.

This is the sum and substance of that which has been said on the subject.

A perfect union of wit and judgment, is one of the rarest things in the world.

Praise, like gold and diamonds, owes to its scarcity only its value.

Intemperance will make life short and sad, though it may fire the spirits for an hour.
From their errors of education, all their miseries have proceeded.

Their disinterestedness of conduct produced general admiration.

I viewed the habitation of my departed friend.—Venerable shade! I then gave thee a tear: accept now of one cordial drop that falls to thy memory.

To-day we are here; to-morrow we are gone.

This author is more remarkable for strength of sentiment, than harmonious language.

Many persons are more delighted with correct and elegant language, than with the importance of sentiment and the accuracy of reasoning.

I feel myself grateful to my friend, for all the instances of his kindness, which he has often manifested to me.

It is not from this world that any source of comfort can arise, to cheer the gloom of the last hour.

SECTION IV.

See the Key, p. 473.

It is dangerous for beauty that is mortal, or for terrestrial virtue, to be examined by a light that is too strong for it.

Beautiful women possess seldom any great accomplishments; because they study behaviour rather than solid excellence, for the most part.

It is to discover the temper of froward children, not that of men, far less that of Christians, to fret and repine at every disappointment of our wishes.
It is ordained and decreed by Providence, that nothing shall be obtained in our present state, that is truly valuable, except it be with difficulty and danger.

Pauses of ease and relaxation, labour necessarily requires; and the deliciousness of ease makes us commonly unwilling to return to labour.

Nothing which is not right, can be great: nothing can be suitable to the dignity of the human mind, which reason condemns.

We have warm hopes in youth, which are blasted soon by negligence and rashness; and great designs which are defeated by inexperience and ignorance of the world.

The haunts of dissipation, by night and day, open many a wide and inviting gate to the children of idleness and sloth.

True virtue (as all its parts are connected, piety with morality, charity with justice, benevolence with temperance and fortitude) must form one complete and entire system.

Dissimulation obscures parts and learning; degrades the lustre of every accomplishment; and plunges us into universal contempt.

Confident as you now are in your assertions, and positive as you are in your opinions, be assured the time approaches, when things and men will appear in a different light to you.

In this age of dissipation and luxury in which we live, how many avenues are constantly open that carry us to the gates of folly!
Through extravagance and idleness, and vain inclination of emulating others in the splendid show of life, many run into charges exceeding their property.

Objects are separated from each other, by their qualities: they are distinguished by the distance of time or place.

Clarendon, being a man of extensive abilities, stored his mind with a variety of ideas; which circumstance contributed to the successful exertion of his vigorous capacity.

SECTION V.

See the Key, p. 475.

The most high degree of reverence and attention should be paid to youth; and nothing that is indecent or indelicate, should be suffered to approach their eyes or their ears.

He who is blessed with a clear conscience, in the worst conjunctures of human life, enjoys an elevation of mind peculiar to virtue, as well as dignity and peace.

The hand of industry may change, in a few years, the face of a country; but to alter the sentiments and manners of a people, requires often as many generations.

When the human mind dwells attentively and long upon any subject, the passions are apt to grow enthusiastic, interested, and warm; and the understanding which they ought to obey, they often force into their service.

Some years after, being released from prison, by reason of his consummate knowledge of civil law, and of military affairs, he was exalted to the supreme power.

The discontented man (as his spleen irritates and sours his temper, and leads him to discharge its venom on all with whom he stands connected) is never found without a great share of malignity.

We cannot doubt but all the proceedings of Providence will appear as equitable, when fully understood and completely intelligible, as now they seem irregular.

All that great wealth gives more than a moderate fortune, generally is, more room for the freaks of caprice, and privilege for ignorance and vice; of flatteries a quicker succession, and a larger circle of voluptuousness.

The miscarriages of the great designs of princes, are recorded in the histories of the world; but are of little use to the bulk of mankind, who seem very little interested in records of miscarriages, which cannot happen to them.

Were there any man who could say, in the course of his life, that he had never suffered himself to be transported by passion, or had never given just ground of offence to any one, such a man might, when he received from others unreasonable treatment, have some plea for impatience.

Christianity will, at some future period, influence the conduct of nations as well as individuals. But this will be, though its greatest, probably its latest triumph: for this can be only brought about through the medium of private character; and therefore will not be rapid in its progress, and visible at every step; but gradual, and visible when considerable effects only have been produced.

The British constitution stands, like an ancient oak in the wood, among the nations of the earth; which, after having overcome many a blast, overtops the other trees of the forest, and commands respect and veneration.

SECTION VI.

See the Key, p. 477.

What an anchor is to a vessel amidst a boisterous ocean, on a coast unknown, and in a dark night, that is the hope of future happiness to the soul, when beset by the confusions of the world: for in danger it affords one fixed point of rest; amidst general fluctuation, it gives security.

Our pride and self-conceit (by nourishing a weak and childish sensibility to every fancied point of our own honour or interest, while they shut up all regard to the honour or interest of our brethren) render us quarrelsome and contentious.

If there be any first principle of wisdom, it undoubtedly is this: the distresses that are removable, endeavour to remove; bear, with as little disquiet as you can, the distresses which cannot be removed: comforts are to be found in every situation and condition of life; having found them, enjoy them.

Instead of aspiring farther than your proper level, bring your mind down to your state; lest you spend your life in a train of fruitless pursuits, by aiming too high, and at last bring yourself to an entire state of insignificance and contempt.

Often have we seen, that what we considered as a sore disappointment at the time, has proved to be a merciful providence in the issue; and that it would have been so far from making us happy, if what we once eagerly wished for had been obtained, that it would have produced our ruin.

Can the stream continue to advance when it is deprived of the fountain? Can the branch improve, when taken from the stock which gave it nourishment? Dependent spirits can no more be happy, when parted from all union with the Father of spirits, and the Fountain of happiness.

Prosperity is redoubled to a good man, by means of the generous use which he makes of it; and it is reflected back upon him, by every one whom he makes happy: for, in the esteem and good-will of all who know him, in the gratitude of dependents, in the attachment of friends, and the intercourse of domestic affection, he sees blessings multiplied round him on every side.

Whoever would pass, with honour and decency, the latter part of life, must consider when he is young, that one day he shall be old; and remember that when he is old, he has once been young: he must lay up knowledge, in youth, for his support, when his powers of acting shall forsake him; and forbear to animadvert in age, with rigour, on faults which experience can alone correct.

Let us consider that youth is of no long duration; and that when the enchantments of fancy in maturer age shall cease, and phantoms no more dance about us, we shall have no comforts but wise men's esteem, the approbation of our hearts, and the means of doing good: and let us live as men that are to grow old some time, and to whom of all evils it will be the most dreadful, to count their years past only by follies, and to be reminded of their former luxuriance of health, by the maladies only which riot has produced.

TRANSPOSING THE PARTS OF A SENTENCE,

AND IN VARYING THE FORM OF EXPRESSING A SENTIMENT.

APPENDIX.

CHAPTER I.
ON TRANSPOSING THE MEMBERS OF A SENTENCE.

The practice of transposing the members of sentences, is an exercise so useful to young persons, that it requires a more particular explanation, than could have been properly given in the preceding work. A few of the various modes in which the parts of a sentence may be arranged, have, therefore, been collected; and they are, with other matter, produced in the form of an Appendix to the general Exercises. By examining them attentively, the student will perceive, in some degree, the nature and effect of transposition: and, by being frequently exercised in showing its variety in other sentences, he will obtain a facility in the operation; and a dexterity in discovering and applying, on all occasions, the clearest and most forcible arrangement. By this practice, he will also be able more readily to penetrate the meaning of such sentences, as are rendered obscure and perplexing to most readers, by the irregular disposition of their parts.

The first and last forms of each class of examples, are to be considered as the least exceptionable.

The Roman state evidently declined, in proportion to the increase of luxury.

Whoever considers the uncertainty of human affairs, and how frequently the greatest hopes are frustrated; will see just reason to be always on his guard, and not to place too much dependence on things so precarious.

He who considers how frequently the greatest hopes are frustrated, and the uncertainty of human affairs; will not place too much dependence on things so precarious, and will see just reason to be always on his guard.

He will see just reason to be always on his guard, and not to place too much dependence on the precarious things of time; who considers the uncertainty of human affairs, and how often the greatest hopes are frustrated.

Let us not conclude, while dangers are at a distance, and do not immediately approach us, that we are secure; unless we use the necessary precautions to prevent them.

Let us not conclude that we are secure, while dangers are at a distance, and do not immediately approach us, unless we use the necessary precautions to prevent them.
TO THE EXERCISES.

While dangers are at a distance, and do not immediately approach us, let us not conclude that we are secure, unless we use the necessary precautions to prevent them.

Those things which appear great to one who knows nothing greater, will sink into a diminutive size, when he becomes acquainted with objects of a higher nature.

When one becomes acquainted with objects of a higher nature, those things which appeared great to him whilst he knew nothing greater, will sink into a diminutive size.

To one who knows nothing greater, those things which then appear great, will sink into a diminutive size, when he becomes acquainted with objects of a higher nature.
CHAPTER II.
ON VARIETY OF EXPRESSION.

Besides the practice of transposing the parts of sentences, the Compiler recommends to tutors, frequently to exercise their pupils, in exhibiting some of the various modes, in which the same sentiment may be properly expressed. This practice will extend their knowledge of the language, afford a variety of expression, and habituate them to deliver their sentiments with clearness, ease, and propriety. It will likewise enable those who may be engaged in studying other languages, not only to construe them, with more facility, into English; but also to observe and apply, more readily, many of the turns and phrases, which are best adapted to the genius of those languages. A few examples of this kind of exercise, will be sufficient to explain the nature of it, and to show its utility.

The brother deserved censure more than his sister.

The sister was less reprehensible than her brother.

The sister did not deserve reprehension, so much as her brother.

Reproof was more due to the brother, than to the sister.
I will attend the conference, if I can do it conveniently.

I intend to be at the conference, unless it should be inconvenient.

If I can do it with convenience, I purpose to be present at the conference.

If it can be done without inconvenience, I shall not fail to attend the conference.

I shall not absent myself from the conference, unless circumstances render it necessary.

He who lives always in the bustle of the world, lives in a perpetual warfare.

To live continually in the bustle of the world, is to live in perpetual warfare.

By living constantly in the bustle of the world, our life becomes a scene of contention.

It is a continual warfare, to live perpetually in the bustle of the world.

The hurry of the world, to him who always lives in it, is a perpetual conflict.

They who are constantly engaged in the tumults of the world, are strangers to the blessings of peace.

The spirit of true religion breathes gentleness and affability.

Gentleness and affability are the genuine effects of true religion.

True religion teaches us to be gentle and affable.
Genuine religion will never produce an austere temper, or a rough demeanour.

Harshness of manners and want of condescension, are opposite to the spirit of true religion.

Industry is not only the instrument of improvement, but the foundation of pleasure.

Industry produces both improvement and pleasure.

Improvement and pleasure are the products of industry.

The common attendants on idleness are ignorance and misery.

Valerius passed several laws, abridging the power of the senate, and extending that of the people.

Several laws were passed by Valerius, which abridged the power of the senate, and extended that of the people.

The power of the senate was abridged, and that of the people extended, by several laws passed during the consulship of Valerius.

The advantages of this world, even when innocently gained, are uncertain blessings.

If the advantages of this world were innocently gained, they are still uncertain blessings.

We may indeed innocently gain the advantages of this world; but even then they are uncertain blessings.
Uncertainty attends all the advantages of this world, not excepting those which are innocently acquired.

The blessings which we derive from the advantages of this world, are not secure, even when they are innocently gained.

When you behold wicked men multiplying in number, and increasing in power, imagine not that Providence particularly favours them.

When wicked men are observed to multiply in number, and increase in power, we are not to suppose that they are particularly favoured by Providence.

From the increase and prosperity of the wicked, we must not infer that they are the favourites of Providence.

Charity consists not in speculative ideas of general benevolence, floating in the head, and leaving the heart, as speculations too often do, untouched and cold.

Speculative ideas of general benevolence do not form the virtue of charity, for these often float in the head, and leave the heart untouched and cold.

Speculations which leave the heart unaffected and cold, though they may consist of general benevolence floating in the head, do not form the great virtue of charity.

Universal benevolence to mankind, when it rests in the abstract, does not constitute the noble virtue of charity. It is then a loose indeterminate idea, rather than a principle of real effect: and floats as a useless speculation in the head, instead of affecting the temper and the heart.

A wolf let into the sheepfold, will devour the sheep.

If we let a wolf into the fold, the sheep will be devoured.

The wolf will devour the sheep, if the sheepfold be left open.

A wolf being let into the sheepfold, the sheep will be devoured.

If the fold be not left carefully shut, the wolf will devour the sheep.

There is no defence of the sheep from the wolf, unless it be kept out of the fold.

A slaughter will be made amongst the sheep, if the wolf can get into the fold.

The preceding examples show that the form of expressing a sentiment may be properly varied, by turning the active voice of verbs into the passive, and the nominative case of nouns into the objective; by altering the connexion of short sentences, by different adverbs and conjunctions, and by the use of prepositions; by applying adjectives and adverbs instead of substantives, and vice versa; by using the case absolute in place of the nominative and verb, and the participle instead of the verb; by reversing the correspondent parts of the sentence; and by the negation of the contrary, instead of the assertion of the thing first proposed. By these and other modes of expression, a great variety of forms of speech, exactly, or nearly of the same import, may be produced; and the young student furnished with a considerable store for his selection and use.

When the business of transposing the parts of sentences, and of varying the forms of expression, becomes familiar to the student, he may be employed in reducing the particulars of a few pages, to general heads; and in expanding sentiments generally expressed, into their correspondent particulars: and by making these operations more or less general, and more or less particular, a considerable variety will be introduced into this part of the Exercises.

An employment of the kind here proposed, will not only make the learner skilful in the meaning and application of terms, and in the nature of a concise and of a copious style: but it will also teach him to think with order and attention; to contract or expand his views at pleasure; and to digest the sentiments of other persons, or his own, in the manner best adapted to assist his judgment and memory.
